

New Clinician Educator (CE) position at PENN-CHOP

In partnership with Children's Hospital of Philadelphia (CHOP), the PENN Nursing (SON) is providing an exciting and unique opportunity for a new Standing Faculty Clinician-Educator that will help bridge academic-service excellence in pediatric nursing education and research. This position will help create innovative undergraduate curriculum in pediatric acute care nursing at PENN and provide leadership in advancing nursing competency and expertise at CHOP.

We are seeking a candidate with a clear program of research in innovative pedagogical methods supporting pediatric nursing practice and educational program development/evaluation. The practice component will be defined by providing leadership in helping to build a stellar undergraduate program in pediatric nursing that facilitates a seamless undergraduate transition to nursing practice within tertiary level children's healthcare facilities. The research component is continued work in building a program of research focused on developing innovative pedagogical methods applicable to pediatric nursing. The candidate will be committed to working within intra and interprofessional clinical teams to advance nursing practice at top of licensure and expertise.

We invite PhD prepared nurses to apply to the standing faculty (clinician-educator) at the mid-career or senior rank. Postdoctoral training or academic experience is expected. Rank and salary will be commensurate with qualifications and experience.
