teaching of others, it is interesting to note how soon they sense the need for perfection in themselves. They grow to realize the value of organizing their knowledge and they seem to see the need to do the right things at the right time. What this type of experience can do in the development of wide-awake students is expressed in these words of John Ruskin,

"The greatest thing a human soul ever does in this world is to see something and tell what it saw in a plain way. Hundreds of people can talk for one who can think, but thousands can think for one who can see. To see clearly is poetry, prophecy, and religion all in one."

As teachers, it is our privilege to guide our students into this experience, that they in turn may pass it on. This is the challenge we face as we look ahead, and though we face with some trepidation the many adjustments in the curriculum which may have to be made to meet the heavy demands of today, let us not forget that the time will surely come when this war will have an end, and the new generation of nurses must be thoroughly prepared to assume their share of leadership in the serious work which lies ahead.

Of the work of nurses may this be said, in the words of Elizabeth Barrett Browning,

"The world may sound no trumpet, ring no bells,
The book of life the shining record tells."

Needs and Suggestions for Expansion

Isabel M. Stewart, R.N., Director of the Division of Nursing Education, Teachers College, Columbia University, New York, New York

Everyone here knows that some expansion in nursing education is necessary to meet war needs. The main question is not whether we should expand but where to expand and how to plan so that we shall get the quickest and best results with the least possible dislocation and weakening of our educational programs. There are risks and dangers, of course, especially when we have to push such a program through in a hurry with overburdened staffs already working under high pressure and with inadequate financial and clinical facilities. But risks or no risks, war needs must be met and ways must be found to adjust our educational resources to these new demands.

What are some of these risks and dangers?

1. Inflation—an oversupply of professional nurses leading to unemployment and lower salaries
2. Dilution—the sacrifice of quality to quantity
3. Competition—the possible displacement of professionals by untrained or semi-trained workers, causing loss of status as well as economic losses

4. Over-expansion and possible break-down of educational machinery—the re-opening of poor schools, the development of new schools on a low basis, et cetera

5. Regression to lower levels—the possible loss of the gains made during recent years, the possible break-down in state laws and regulations governing nursing practice, et cetera.

All these are serious, but a much greater risk is that we shall not have enough nurses of any kind to take care of the armed forces and to keep our hospital and public health services going at home.

Expanding educational resources to meet war needs

What do we mean by resources? This term can be interpreted narrowly to mean funds, buildings, supplies, clinical facilities, and other material assets. It actually includes all the means necessary to meet the situation we are in; everything required to accomplish our purpose, including personnel, public opinion, on-going trends in social life, individual and professional assets. The word “resource” embodies a dynamic concept—something springing forth. There is nothing passive or static about it. Think what is implied in the word resourcefulness—initiative, contrivance, imagination, ingenuity, fertility of suggestion—all bursting with creative implications. Some of these resources are tangible and material, for example, buildings, plants, funds. Others are intangible and illusive—resources of courage, intelligence, and esprit de corps.

How can we expand our resources for educational work in nursing?

Expansion may be made possible by:

1. The salvage of what might otherwise be lost or wasted
2. Greater economy and more efficient utilization of what we have
3. The tapping and exploiting of new resources of energy, materials and the like
4. The substituting of something else that may serve as well, or better.

Americans are said to be extravagant and wasteful in the use of all kinds of material resources. It is said that in 150 years we have used up 85 per cent of our useful wild game, 80 per cent of our timber, 67 per cent of our petroleum, 50 per cent to 60 per cent of our lead, zinc, and copper, 50 per cent of our fisheries, and 10 per cent of our cultivatable land. We have also been wasteful of our human resources and have squandered the health, capacity, and talent of unnumbered individuals. I believe that 50 per cent or more of the potential nurse power of this country has never been used—largely because of the traditional restrictions on the nurse’s intellectual powers and initiative. Nurses are bursting with ideas that they have never been able to express or to use because of the taboos that we ourselves, and our medical brothers, have built up and perpetuated.
What are our present needs and how much expansion is required to meet them?

Planning groups in nursing (chiefly representing the National Nursing Council for War Service and the subcommittee on Nursing of the Health and Medical Committee of the Office of the Defense and Welfare Services) have been working on these problems for the past two years and their estimates, based on the best information they could get, have varied from month to month and almost from week to week. The fact is that no one can tell exactly how many extra nurses will be needed in the next two or three years or until the war is over. It depends on how successful we are in filling up the gaps in our RN ranks from the inactive or partially active nurses who as yet have not come forward in the numbers expected. It depends also on the number of auxiliary workers we can bring in and how many we can safely absorb in hospitals and other health agencies. It depends on how much and how fast the armed forces expand. We plan for an army of four million, and before we know it, it may be raised to seven or even ten million. At the present ratio of six nurses in the Army and three in the Navy to every thousand men, the total number of nurses for the armed forces may go from the present figure of a little over 10,000 to 30,000 or 40,000 within the next two or three years. Meanwhile civilian needs will probably go on increasing, especially if the war comes to our own shores.

The latest estimates based on all these and other factors are that nursing schools should be prepared to increase their entering groups by 10,000 each year during the next two or three years. Taking 45,000 as the approximate figure for the school year 1941-42, this would mean that schools should admit 55,000 new students in 1942-1943 and, if the war continues that long, 65,000 in 1943-1944. With a little over 90,000 students now enrolled in nursing schools, there would be about 100,000 in the school year of 1942-1943 and about 110,000 in the year following.

This brings us to the question of whether the 1,300 schools of nursing in this country can take care of such an increase. The replies to a questionnaire recently sent out by the National League of Nursing Education (reported in the American Journal of Nursing, April, 1942) indicate that of 426 schools connected with hospitals having an average of 100 or more patients, about a quarter (104) could have admitted 2,728 additional students during the past year if qualified applicants had been available, and about three-quarters (322) could have admitted 2,698 more students if they had been able to increase certain types of facilities. First mentioned was housing. Next in order came teaching facilities (classrooms, laboratories, and equipment), instructors and supervisors, and clinical facilities. These replies, together with replies from the schools receiving federal funds during the fiscal year 1941-1942, have convinced the planning group that the schools of the country can stretch their facilities to take care of 10,000 more students next year on two conditions. First, a larger number of desirable applicants must be secured and, second, needed assistance must be given to schools that are ready and able to expand —provided, of course, they can take care of a substantial number of these extra applicants at a cost that is not too high and can give them an adequate preparation.

On this basis, plans are now being made to go ahead with more intensive recruiting and to apply for an increase in federal appropriations for nursing education for next year. There are also plans for developing a few regional central schools that will be located in areas where suitable clinical and educational facilities are available. It will take a little time to build up such centers, but the hope is that they will be ready to help with the increased load of students the following year and that they will also serve as examples of what may be done in other sections of the country where similar facilities are available. Some of these facilities will be found in civilian institutions and health services; some in the new emergency hospitals that are going up in industrial boom towns; some in veterans' hospitals or even, in certain areas, in Army base hospitals. Preliminary surveys are now being made by the educational staff of the United States Public Health Service to determine the best locations for such central schools, and it is hoped that government funds may be secured to finance such an expansion of our educational system to meet wartime needs.

Who is to do all these things, and where does the chief responsibility lie? We are all glad to know that the government recognizes its share in this expansion program and is helping with funds. The public is also acutely aware of the need, and there are indications that we can count on public support for education if we can show that our first concern is the supply of more nursing service. Educational and health agencies are directly interested in these problems also. During the last few months higher educational institutions, from junior colleges up, have been showing an increased concern in the education of nurses.

In the last analysis, however, we all know where the main responsibility rests for planning and also for putting plans through. It rests on the organized profession of nursing. If we do not find a way, others will. It is far better for us to get ready to make minor compromises than to have plans forced on us that may bring about major dislocations in our schools and nursing services. Our national nursing organizations and government nursing services have already formed a common front in order to be better able to consolidate their forces and pool their thinking. This common front must be extended to the states, to the local communities, and to every nursing school in the country. Every graduate and student nurse must know her part in the chain of activities that supplies the armed forces and the civilian population with essential life-saving services. We must know not only what needs to be done, but what should be done first.

The word "priority" is one of the key words in the war lingo, along with "bottleneck," "acceleration," and the rest. We hear of priorities in rubber, metals, gasoline, and foodstuffs, in manpower and womanpower, in all kinds of occupations that are essential to the war effort. It is gratifying to know that the authorities in Washington have put nursing high in the priority list of vocations and this applies to the education of nurses. No one argues about the need for preparing nurses any more than they argue about the need for training aviators. These are absolute "musts" in our wartime economy. A new hierarchy of values determines the precedence of all such activities. Will it help win the war? Will it strengthen and conserve our fighting forces? Will it increase the productive power of our workers? Will it safeguard our citizens and especially the children who are the hope of the future? Will it advance the cause of democracy?

Most of us agree that these are primary values, but are we ready to act on them? If so, we must set up a list of nursing priorities based on these and other essential values. Among so many activities that are of high importance it is hard to decide which are the most essential. The old conflicts between nursing service and nursing education are flaring up again in many institutions. Quantity versus quality, minimum versus optimum standards, the status quo versus changes in tempo, content, methods, and the like. These and many other questions are in their essence priority problems. Our decisions will depend on the scale of values we accept. They will also depend on whether we are taking a long view or a short view of the present emergency. If we believe that the war will be over soon and things will go on much as before, we might safely improvise a short-term plan to increase production that might tide us over the crisis. If, on the other hand, we believe that the war is likely to last two or three years or longer, and that the post-war world will bring a new set of conditions and needs, our planning should be on a long-term basis.

Priorities in nursing personnel

Let us start with the personnel needs of the present, as far as we can see them. Everyone will agree that the largest demand is for all-round, general duty nurses who can serve as staff nurses in military or civilian hospitals. Much smaller from the standpoint of numbers but not less important, is the executive and teaching group that directs and supervises graduate staffs, student nurses, and auxiliary workers in institutions and carries on the educational programs for these various bodies of workers. According to replies received from the groups of schools previously quoted, the greatest shortage is clinical teachers and supervisors. Next in order they mention instructors of nursing arts, and next, science instructors. Although directors of nursing schools and nursing services are not specifically referred to, we all know that at this time, when new developments are in progress and new patterns of organization and procedure have to be worked out, leadership and executive groups are of essential importance.

Public health nurses come next in the priority list. With industries expanding at a tremendous rate and new communities springing up all over the country, there can be no question about the need for more staff nurses in public health nursing, and also for more teaching, supervisory, and executive specialists. There is a definite demand for teachers of home nursing and for nurses to direct and supervise the training of nurse's aides and other auxiliary workers.

Many other nurses are doing vitally important work. Private nurses, for example, are indispensable at all times, but so far there does not seem to be any shortage of private nurses, and they present no pressing educational problem at the moment. This same is true of office nurses and many other groups.

What kind of nurses are needed to fill these ranks?

Priorities have been set up for the war training and service of men. So far little has been done to direct women into specific fields of work. That may come later, as in Britain and other countries that have been shorter at war. In the meantime we have to depend on the voluntary system to recruit the young people we need. Nursing schools are, of course, trying to select the best of those who apply, but the results have not always been satisfactory from the standpoint of either quantity or quality. Competition is keen, especially in certain branches of war service where there are larger money inducements, quicker training, and not so much "blood, sweat, and tears." But nursing has still a strong appeal, not only to the young and romantic but to the more serious and far-sighted who sense the new futures in health work and the advancing frontiers of opportunity that are likely to open up not only during the war but after.

A word might be said here about the probable demands of the post-war period. Many of us have been concerned about the prospects of future unemployment. We all know that there will be no lack of work for nurses to do, either during or after the war, but regular employment, even on a bread-and-butter basis, is a different matter. It is encouraging to have the assurance of responsible government officials that plans are already under way for expansion of health and welfare services which will absorb a large number of nurses. Most of these positions will be in institutional and public health work. Some of this work will probably be in other countries. We must keep these trends in mind in selecting and preparing nurses for service now and in the immediate future.

While the nursing army needs plenty of privates, it needs officers too, and the selection and training of this group cannot be left to chance. In this country nursing executives and teachers have always started in the ranks and worked up to positions of greater responsibility, getting their training partly through experience and partly through organized study. Although this plan has worked well on the whole, we have never had nearly enough well-qualified people for positions of responsibility. The proportion of potential leaders in each year's crop of graduates has never been large enough to satisfy the needs of the field, even in ordinary times, and there is going to be a great shortage if we cannot bring in a larger proportion of officer material in our present classes.

We now have about 25,000 nurses in executive and teaching positions in hospitals and nursing schools. This constitutes one-twelfth of our total active group of 300,000 graduate nurses. With the proposed expansion of student nurses by 15 per cent to 20 per cent yearly, this proportion will have to be increased to at least one-tenth, or 30,000. If we allow for a 50 per cent mortality from matrimony and other causes, we reach the conclusion that one in every five of the nurses graduating each year should be able to qualify for educational and administrative work in hospitals and nursing schools. Specifically, out of the 45,000 who entered in 1941-42, there should be 9,000, and out of the 55,000 needed for 1942-43, 11,000 who are fitted by native capacity, maturity, and leadership ability for such responsible work. The same proportion of each class should be available for the various branches and grades of public health work. Of course, these new graduates will not be ready to take over special responsibilities without additional experience and preparation. Many of them will drop out before they get beyond the first steps of the ladder, but the potential material must be available in sufficient amounts so that we shall have enough who survive matrimony and all the other hurdles and hazards that tend to deplete our ranks.

Because of the war situation, we shall have to push these younger people ahead more rapidly than usual into positions of responsibility, and that is why we need to put special emphasis on maturity, initiative, and broad educational background in recruiting candidates for nursing schools today. No matter how clever and promising young high school graduates may be, they must have time to mature, and if we force their growth or urge them to assume responsibilities before they are ready, the results may be very unfortunate.

These points should be considered in the guidance of young graduates as well as student nurses. We have given far too little attention to the selection of those we put in charge of students and other groups in hospitals. We need to have a committee at work studying this whole question of what we mean by leadership, what types of leadership ability are called for in nursing, and how we cannot only pick potential leaders but help to develop them during the period of basic preparation and later. Such a committee might also make recommendations about the guidance of promising younger candidates who should be urged to remain in school or college for at least two years beyond high school instead of coming directly into nursing schools. They might suggest ways of helping such candidates financially, or directing them toward scholarship or other aids. Applicants who have already had certain kinds of preparation, such as science teachers, home economics specialists, and the like, should be helped to capitalize their special assets as speedily as possible. Some of these may not need to go through the whole nursing preparation in order to be useful as teachers in nursing schools. Such instructors might be classed in the group of nurse substitutes.

Well-prepared teachers and supervisors should be urged not to switch over into other forms of work when so many teaching and supervisory positions are unfilled. There are a number of married nurses who have had such preparation who might be doing at least part-time work if they could be discovered and, perhaps after a brief refresher course, got back into harness. Young graduates who show superior promise should be helped to get a start toward special preparation, even though they may not be able to take a full program until later. Those who are farther on should be helped to wind up their studies as rapidly as possible so they will be ready for new positions. Even though our hospitals and nursing schools are working under great pressure, it would seem that some way should be found to release a certain proportion of the staff for study in order that the supply of qualified teachers and executives may be kept up and a serious dilution of our educational standards prevented. We hear of nurses with excellent qualifications for teaching or supervision who are being pushed into military service, and of many promising younger nurses who are eager to start their preparation for institutional or public health positions but who cannot afford to pay for even a few months of study, or cannot be released from their present positions for study. Undoubtedly our new committee on supply and distribution under Miss Tucker and Mrs. Conrad will give us some help on these problems of personnel. These are only a few of the things that need to be done to supply nursing schools and nursing services with the people that they must have if they are to produce the greatly enlarged army of nurses that the country needs.

How to provide educational resources to prepare these workers

One of our big problems is how to take care of the large groups of students needing basic preparation in nursing. It is not easy to stretch our existing schools to admit 25 per cent to 30 per cent or more new students without over-straining both plant and personnel. A number of suggestions have been made in the report of the Committee on Educational Policies, published in the February, 1942, Journal, and I do not want to repeat these here. I may say, however, that colleges and universities are showing that they are willing to share their facilities with nursing schools, and over two hundred of them (according to recent questionnaire study of the Association of Collegiate Schools of Nursing) are planning to offer some kind of a program in nursing this summer, one hundred of these being listed as pre-nursing courses.

Besides the possible use on a wider scale of existing educational and service institutions, we may count as resources certain trends in educational thinking that are definitely favorable to nursing programs. Higher education is adjusting itself rapidly to the demands of war, and nursing, for women, is being recognized more and more as something like an equivalent of the army and navy service for men. In other words, it has a priority rating in many of these institutions. In a recent article by Eli Ginsberg in the Educational Record (April, 1942) on "College Trained Women and the War Effort," the author reports on a study of the programs of college women, and notes that two-thirds have chosen programs that will give either or no preparation for vocations where shortages are at present greatest. He urges that college advisers make a more definite effort to switch these young women into programs which will enable them to contribute more usefully to the war effort, and he lists among the fields where marked shortages exist, medical and related fields, including nursing, nutrition, hygiene, and public health. Referring to the fact that “the problem of manpower has now become largely the problem of womanpower,” this writer suggests that mandatory assignment of women between eighteen and forty-four years of age, as at present in Great Britain, may be the next step here if voluntary measures do not bring the desired results.

Things are moving fast in these and other ways. Financial assistance from the Government is now assured for nursing education programs. This sets a precedent. We do not know where it may lead, but there is not much doubt that public support is likely to increase during the war and the probability is that it may continue in some form after the war. Another potential resource is public opinion. Nursing and nurses are in the spotlight today. There are some dangers in this situation because at such times as these it is easy for a demagogue or an uninformed person to propose measures that might be disastrous. The only remedy for that is to educate public opinion so it will not be swept off its feet. We assume that most people understand what we are talking about when we speak of nursing education, but it is amazing to find well-educated individuals—even college presidents—who do not know the difference between the training of a nurse’s aide and the preparation of a professional nurse. The aids, by the way, are a great potential source of good-will or ill-will toward nursing and nursing education. It depends on us which attitude will be stronger, and what interpretation of nursing they are going to give to their friends and the public at large.

A few days ago I was speaking to a business man on some question relating to nursing education and he said, “What you nurses need more than anything is a public relations councilor.” I believe he was right, though I don’t know where we could ever find the money for one of those high-powered experts. Certainly we need some help right at this time in capitalizing the real interest of the public in the service nurses give, and in the means by which they are to be prepared to care for the armed forces and the folks at home.

We also have great resources within ourselves and our profession. As a group we nurses don’t boast very much, but we think a good deal of ourselves nevertheless, and we know that we are absolutely essential in this war effort. Moreover, we know that we have the confidence of the public. No matter what our colleagues in medicine may say at times, we know and they know that they are pretty helpless without us. Just think what a hospital would be if all the nurses were taken out of it even for an hour. Professionally we are well organized. We have the machinery to do great things if we can only get it started and keep it going full-speed toward the right objectives.

There are all positive assets, resources that we can count on, but we do have some limitations and handicaps as well. Morale, especially during the pre-Pearl Harbor period, was none too good. There was hesitation, indecision, fear, insecurity, friction, confusion, and some complacency. The old service motive and even the sense of adventure seemed to be lacking in many modern nurses, and the response to patriotic appeals was not as spontaneous and immediate as we expected. Many of us have been disturbed because nurses seemed to be losing the reputation for dependability that we have prided ourselves on, and many were failing to make good on their pledges for service. We are quite aware of the reasons—chiefly romantic—but we are not convinced that these are sufficient to justify most of the withdrawals from active service at a time of great need. In all these respects, however, nurses have reflected changing standards of attitude and behavior. Our morale has been rising in recent months, but there is still room for improvement. Morale is a mixture of faith, confidence, pride, and determination. It has its origin in the moral and spiritual nature of individuals and is influenced greatly by the tone and quality of the group—its esprit de corps.

In meeting the different problems of this emergency, we need to draw upon the intelligence and experience of our own group and of others who can contribute anything in the way of sound advice or information. Nurses have good minds, and they are usually at their best in meeting practical situations, but many of these wartime situations are new and our old patterns of thinking and acting do not fit them very well. If we are going to adjust to such situations, our minds must be stretched and limbered up. This is not an easy or comfortable process, especially for those with inflexible minds. Much of our thinking has been limited by our own institutional situations and traditions, and by inbred conservatism and inertia. It has been limited also by community, state, and regional barriers. Many of us find it hard to think in national terms, and still harder to extend our thinking to the world beyond our national borders. But that is what we have to do if we are to meet the larger problems of nursing today and tomorrow. As Edith Cavell said in her last message to her nurses, "Patriotism is not enough!" We can say the same of nationalism and also of professionalism. An exaggerated professionalism may isolate us from other human beings and make us more concerned with our own interests and status than with the actual service for which our profession exists. Factionalism and specialism within our own professional group also set up barriers. They tend to divide us when we need, above all things, to be united.

There are some other patterns of thinking that handicap us in nursing and, of course, in other groups as well. One is the "business as usual" attitude, the refusal to admit that there is an emergency and that we can't just go on as before. Another is the negativistic attitude that greets every new situation with: "It can't be done," "It won't work," or "It can be done only in my way." Then there is the hypercritical attitude of those who see only faults in everything and everybody and publicize these opinions widely and loudly. I need not mention the alibi attitude; the "rubber stamp" mentality; the herd-mindedness of timid individuals who never have any opinions of their own and are always afraid of differing from the crowd. Such people as these are not much help in a crisis. We cannot bank on them as a positive asset unless they change their attitudes, as I am sure some of them can, and will.

Fortunately we have among us a good many nurses who are straight thinkers, hard workers, constructive critics, generous and loyal in their attitudes toward fellow workers, open minded toward new ideas and plans, and courageous and creative in meeting new problems. We need much more of this type of leadership than we now have, and we must try to develop it among our younger as well as our older members. Unless we have such leadership it does not matter much what our other resources are, because we shall not be able to agree on common plans and policies, or mobilize our forces to carry them out. Not only success in our war effort, but the future of nursing education and nursing service are involved in our efforts. If we can muster all our resources, weather this storm, and meet our obligations, we shall emerge from this war stronger and more united than we have ever been, and ready to face whatever problems the future may bring.

FEDERAL AID FOR NURSING EDUCATION

Federal aid has been available to colleges for the education of agricultural and home economics workers for a number of years.

In 1935, the Social Security Act (Title VI) specifically authorized the use of federal funds for the training of public health workers.

In 1940, engineering colleges were given federal aid to increase the training facilities for engineers in order to meet the emergency needs in that field.

Nurses are the largest single group of workers in the health field and the only group of women workers who have military status. Therefore, it is altogether fitting and proper that the Federal Government should assume its share of responsibility in the preparation of the vast army of nurses who will be needed if we are to win this war.

Credit for the development of plans for federal aid for nursing education belongs to the Committee on Educational Policies and Resources of the Nursing Council on National Defense (now the National Nursing Council for War Service). This committee made a careful survey of nursing educational needs and resources late in 1940 and presented these needs to the United States Office of Education in such a convincing manner that the result was the Training for Nurses (national defense) Act.

While this Act did not provide so much aid or so broad a program as was visualized by the Committee on Educational Policies and Resources, it provided a beginning; and if we can render a good account of our stewardship, there is every reason to believe that increased aid will become available next year.

1 Isabel Stewart, Chairman.
The Act—Training for Nurses (national defense) provides for three types of training:

1. Refresher courses for inactive registered nurses
2. Postgraduate education in special fields for graduate nurses
3. Increased student enrollment in basic nursing schools.

Congress placed the administration of this program in the Public Health Service, Federal Security Agency, and the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service was empowered to make rules and regulations with regard to the administration and allotment of the funds. An original appropriation of $1,200,000 was made to carry out the provisions of the Act.

The funds became available July 1, 1941. Since most schools of nursing began their fall terms in September, speed in the preparation of the regulations and the general plan for the use of the funds was imperative.

The first step was to request the Subcommittee on Nursing of the Health and Medical Committee, Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services, to serve as an advisory committee to the Public Health Service in the development of this program. In addition to the members of this committee, three special nursing education consultants were appointed to serve with the Subcommittee on Nursing in an advisory capacity.²

The second step was to set up a civil service job classification for the position of Nursing Education Consultant and to secure the appointment of persons who met the requirements specified by the Civil Service Commission. We were fortunate in securing three very competent nursing educators on rather short notice and by September the program was well under way.

The regulations of the Surgeon General concerning the administration of this program were carefully reviewed and approved by our Nursing Advisory Committee before they were submitted to the Federal Security Administrator and to the President of the United States for approval. The regulations define the requirements for participation in each type of program, the basis for the approval of plans, and the methods of payment to the participating schools.

Requirements for Participation

Any accredited school of nursing is eligible to apply for federal aid to establish refresher courses for inactive graduate nurses. Any accredited school of nursing connected with a hospital having a daily average of 100 or more patients and having a satisfactory distribution of patients in the four basic services (medicine, surgery, obstetrics, and pediatrics) is eligible to apply for aid for basic nursing. Institutions offering postgraduate training must meet standards at least equal to those recommended by the National League of Nursing Education and the Association of Collegiate Schools of ² The members of the Subcommittee on Nursing are Julia C. Stimson, Nellie X. Hawkinson, Sister M. Olivia Gowan, Marion Sheahan, and Marian Howell, chairman. The original chairman was Mary Beard who resigned in November, 1941. The three additional consultants are Isabel M. Stewart, Anna D. Wolf, and Mrs. Elizabeth Soule.

Nursing. To be eligible for aid for public health nursing training, the schools are required to meet the standards recommended by the National Organization for Public Health Nursing.

Basis for the Approval of Plans

Every school which applies for funds for basic nursing education is required to submit a detailed plan which indicates the available clinical facilities, the number and qualifications of the nursing school faculty, the content of the curriculum, and the policies of the school with regard to such matters as hours of work, health services, vacation, recreation, et cetera. A proposed budget which shows in detail the purposes for which the federal funds will be used and the amount of money from local sources which has been allotted to the school of nursing must accompany the plan. The plans and budgets are carefully reviewed and evaluated by the nursing education consultant staff of the Public Health Service on the following bases:

1. The quality of the program
2. The economy of the plan and the number of additional students who can be admitted
3. The need for a greater number of qualified nurses in that particular geographic area.

Criteria for judging the quality of the programs are based upon such recommendations as are contained in the Essentials of a Good School of Nursing, Essentials of a Good Hospital Nursing Service and other publications of the National League of Nursing Education and the Association of Collegiate Schools of Nursing.

Budget Items for Which Federal Funds may be Requested

Federal funds may be used to provide:

1. Additional instructors and instructional facilities
2. Subsistence for the additional students
3. Scholarship tuitions for well-qualified applicants who cannot meet the tuition fees from personal funds
4. Affiliations for basic students in such special services as psychiatry and community health work.

Federal funds may not be used for the construction of buildings, but a reasonable amount for the rent and equipment of additional dormitory space is a legitimate charge against federal funds.

The Act specifically prohibits cash allowances to students. This does not prohibit the giving of scholarship tuitions because in that instance the money for tuition is paid directly to the school and not to the student.

Federal funds may not be used for the organization of new schools, although funds may be used for the reorganization of several existing schools to form a central school of nursing when such a reorganization will provide a more effective educational program.
Methods of Payment

Following the evaluation and approval of plans, an allotment is made to each participating school, and a copy of the operating budget is officially approved by the Surgeon General and returned to the school.

Payments are made on a reimbursement basis. Reimbursement requests for tuition are honored immediately after the student is admitted. Reimbursement requests for such items as salaries and subsistence are submitted at the end of each quarter (September 30, December 31, March 31, and June 30). Downward adjustments may be made in the allotments if the school fails to admit as many students as were provided for on the operating budget.

Accomplishments to Date

The limitations of the original appropriation made it necessary to refuse aid to many schools applying for funds. The Act does not specify what percentage of the appropriation shall be allotted to each type of program. Originally it was thought that a comparatively large amount would be allocated to schools for the establishment of refresher courses. However, when the first applications were tabulated it was found that the requests for basic nursing programs totalled about forty times as much as the requests for refresher courses.

Every school which requested funds for a refresher course was given an allotment. The majority of the schools requesting money for postgraduate programs were given allotments, but only about one third of the basic schools of nursing which applied for funds were given allotments.

A total of over four million dollars was requested by the schools last fall. Many schools reported that they would conduct refresher courses without federal aid if they were given funds to increase their student nurse enrollment.

The allotments by type of program for the $1,200,000 were approximately as follows:

Several schools were handicapped in carrying out their proposed programs last fall because of the limited number of qualified applicants. However, whenever a school failed to secure its full quota of students, a reduction was made accordingly in its allotment, and the funds which reverted were immediately reallocated to some other school. Therefore, the total amount allotted during the year was considerably more than $1,200,000, although the actual expenditures may be slightly less than that amount.

Because the nursing needs were becoming more acute every week and the supply of registered nurses was inadequate to meet the needs in practically every section of the country, in December, 1941, the Surgeon General submitted a request to the Bureau of the Budget for a deficiency appropriation of $600,000 for the nurse training program. This request was approved by the Bureau of the Budget, passed by the Congress, and the funds became available on March 1, 1942.

The primary purpose of the deficiency appropriation was to enable schools of nursing to admit an additional class of student nurses in June or to bring forward the admission date of their regular fall classes to May or June. Another important purpose of this special appropriation was to increase the enrollment of graduate nurses in the advanced nursing educational program. The increased enrollment of students in the basic schools of nursing greatly increases the need for nursing instructors, supervisors, and head nurses.

The response to the request for the admission of additional classes of student nurses in June and for increased enrollment in the postgraduate programs of study has been very encouraging.

To date, allotments have been made to 112 basic schools of nursing to enable those schools to admit more than 3,000 students in June. About 800 additional graduate nurses will be enrolled in administrative and educational programs this summer; and the number of public health nursing students to be enrolled this summer will be increased by about 400. The detailed allotments for the total appropriations of $1,800,000 is as follows:

Plans for Next Year

A re-evaluation of the immediate nursing needs and the available training facilities was made by the Subcommittee on Nursing and the other members of our Advisory Committee in March of this year. As a result of these studies, the following recommendations were made:

<sup>a</sup>This exceeds the total number of schools participating because several have more than one program.

1. That the admission of students to basic schools of nursing be increased to 55,000 during the school year 1942-43; this will mean an increase of about 10,000 over the admissions during the present school year.

2. That the existing schools of nursing which are connected with hospitals having a daily average of 100 or more patients take care of the increase during the coming year.

3. That immediate steps be taken to increase the amount of federal aid for these basic nursing education programs to at least $3,500,000.

4. That the Nursing Education Unit of the Public Health Service undertake field studies to determine where additional acceptable facilities (including both governmental and civilian hospitals) are available for the expansion or development of centralized programs of basic nursing education. These studies are to be undertaken before the end of this fiscal year so that plans for the further expansion of basic nursing schools in 1943-44 may be possible.

A request for $2,000,000 for the Training for Nurses (national defense) for the fiscal year 1943 has been approved by the Bureau of the Budget and is at present receiving consideration from Congress. Of that $2,000,000, about $1,500,000 has been tentatively allocated to basic nursing education programs. In accordance with the recommendations of our Advisory Committee the Surgeon General has requested a supplementary appropriation of $2,000,000, and if this request is approved a total of $4,000,000 will be available for nursing education next year. Of that amount, it is probable that $3,500,000 will be allocated to basic nursing education programs.

With the assistance of our Advisory Committee and four special nursing education consultants who have been appointed by the Public Health Service, plans for the survey of areas where central schools of nursing may be developed and expanded are well under way. Our Advisory Committee recommended that the central schools be established in accordance with the standards of the Association of Collegiate Schools of Nursing and that in the selection of areas, consideration be given to the needs of the area for additional nurses and the opportunities within the area for the expansion and improvement of clinical teaching facilities.

What are Some of the Advantages of a Federal Aid Program for Nursing Education?

The amount of federal aid which has been and is now available is not great. But the influence of that appropriation, small as it is, may be far-reaching. Some of the less tangible benefits are:

1. A greater appreciation on the part of hospital boards and administrators of the importance of a separate budget for the maintenance of the school of nursing. Some of you who have struggled over what appeared to be a series of very complicated plans, budget forms, and reimbursement forms may feel that such "government red tape" is of questionable value! Others have said that the requirement of a definite budget for the nursing school has been of distinct advantage in persuading the hospital board to make specific allocations of funds to the educational program.

2. Several schools with limited clinical facilities in such services as pediatrics and communicable diseases, have been stimulated to develop nursery school projects and affiliations with orthopedic hospitals for children or community health agencies, and have through these developments expanded and improved their teaching facilities in these services.

3. There is increased interest on the part of schools of nursing in the pooling of instructional facilities and in the development of central teaching plans in order to use more economically and to strengthen existing instructional facilities.

4. Public officials and influential laymen have become interested and have gained a sympathetic understanding of nursing education problems. Congressmen, bureau directors, and business men are becoming familiar with and appreciative of those fundamental principles of nursing education which must be observed if we are to preserve and carry forward the high standards of professional nursing care which the public has learned to expect of the nursing profession in America.

REPORTS OF THE USE OF FEDERAL FUNDS FOR NURSING EDUCATION

FEDERAL FUNDS FOR BASIC NURSING IN HOSPITALS AFFILIATED WITH THE DEPARTMENT OF NURSING, MONTANA STATE COLLEGE

ANNA P. SHERICK, R.N., Directing Supervisor of Nursing, Montana State College, Bozeman, Montana

Additional funds for nursing education was a problem which the Department of Nursing of Montana State College requested the advisory committees of the Consolidated Deaconess School of Nursing to consider and study. The Department of Nursing and the advisory committees wrote to Dr. J. W. Studebaker, the Commissioner of Education, requesting assistance. About this time the Department of Nursing of Montana State College learned that the National Nursing Council for War Service was making an appeal for financial assistance for schools of nursing. Our problems were first presented by the Department of Nursing at the college and followed by the advisory committees and the hospitals of each unit of Consolidated Deaconess School of Nursing.

From the report which Miss Stimson gave at Detroit it appeared that the effort of the National Nursing Council for War Service had been in vain.

However, in July, 1941, when questionnaires and instructions were received which made federal moneys available for additional students, the questionnaires were filled out as quickly as desired.

On August 29, 1941, a telegram informed us that we would receive the aid for sixteen additional students. The sixteen additional students were secured. Because federal funds permitted additional instruction, we secured an additional clinical instructor and some assistance for two floor supervisors for Great Falls. The amount allowed for these salaries is $1,805.60. An additional nursing arts instructor and some assistance for the increased teaching load of floor supervisors and head nurses were granted for the Bozeman Unit. The federal moneys will pay $1,494.01 for the additional instruction given at this unit.

The two hospitals have received subsistence for additional students. Great Falls expects to receive $2,501.16 for maintaining the ten additional students. Bozeman requests $1,501.91 for the six additional students admitted to that unit of this school.

The teaching equipment which was added to Bozeman consists of eye and ear models. Frosho charts, models of the circulatory system, nervous system, and the heart aid the Great Falls' teaching program.

One morning in February when discussing with President A. L. Strand of Montana State College the nursing education program and the national need for nurses, President Strand suggested the possibility of using the Montana State College campus during the summer for teaching anatomy and physiology, bacteriology, and chemistry to student nurses before they enter the hospitals for the three-year program. In addition to the scheduled classes a recreation program has been arranged. This program will be directed by a young college woman who has specialized in physical education, and will include sports and games, such as tennis, softball, badminton, and archery, as well as supervised hikes into the surrounding canyons and mountains.

Plans were discussed by the board of examiners for nurses. This board had a conference with President Strand. The United States Public Health Service received a letter proposing this summer quarter, and the college was encouraged to proceed with these plans.

Out of this beginning, we now expect one hundred high school graduates on the Montana State College campus from June 12 to August 24. These students will enter St. James Hospital, Butte; St. Patrick's Hospital, Missoula; the Montana Deaconess Hospital, Great Falls; and the Bozeman Deaconess Hospital, Bozeman.

Another program is being promoted for college women at the Montana Deaconess Hospital, Great Falls, beginning June 22. We are looking for thirty college women interested in nursing to participate in this program.

For affiliations, we are planning to send third-year students to the Montana State Hospital for psychiatric nursing, and to the Montana State Tuberculosis Sanitarium for tuberculosis nursing. This will improve the students' experience and should permit us to take additional students.

Montana State College continues to assist nursing education in Montana.
The federal moneys further aid this land-grant college in giving the required basic sciences for the three-year program. This summer quarter on the campus, we believe, will become so essential that it should remain and extend its services to other hospitals in the years that follow. The degree program has continued to grow and its popularity is extending further each year. As the need for college nurses increases, their number is increasing but should have greater impetus if the vacancies in public health, instruction, supervision, and administration are to be filled with competent women.

HOW THE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF NURSING USED FEDERAL AID

LOUISE KNAPP, R.N., Director, School of Nursing, Washington University, St. Louis, Missouri

Washington University School of Nursing was one of those schools which received aid for the basic course, because we increased the enrollment by admitting a class in February, 1942. In 1941 we did not take a spring class. A few facts about our school will serve as background for an account of the way we used federal funds.

Our school charges tuition and the student pays for her uniforms, books, and other fees. She pays about $325 on entrance and $200 during the remainder of the course, making a total of $525.

Federal funds were used in several ways: for the basic course, for refresher courses, and for a course for head nurses.

Basic Course

1. Tuition scholarships—Valued at $200 each; these were given to nine of the eighteen students admitted in February, 1942. This means that the Government, instead of individual students, will pay. Seven of the nine students had already had experience in paid jobs.
2. Subsistence—The Government paid $20 per month towards the cost of supporting new students who represented an increase in enrollment over the previous year.
3. Salaries
   a. Salary for additional instructor—This was necessary because more students meant more classes and more ward supervision.
   b. Payment for part-time instructors in science courses—Teaching a second class during the year was extra work for the regular faculty.
4. Equipment and supplies—Procedure manuals were mimeographed. Additional classroom supplies were obtained.
5. Small sum for publicity—Publicity was conducted jointly with other schools in a cooperative plan for recruiting.
6. Tuition for students assigned to City Sanitarium for affiliation in mental nursing—In 1941 this affiliation was made available to all students in the school, instead of being limited to a few out of the group. The tuition fees will be used to provide better instruction.

Financial assistance was offered to students but they are still expected to help themselves. One way of measuring a student's determination to succeed... is by testing her willingness to work for her opportunity. Is she willing to work and save? Will she gamble her own savings on her success in nursing?

The aid from the federal government has been most helpful. We want to accomplish the maximum results with the money available and we, therefore, raise the following questions:

What safeguard should we employ to be sure tuition scholarships are wisely used? We have an obligation to be sure they are a wise investment in a student whose future contribution will justify such aid. But, how can we select these applicants? Will students be expected to pledge at least one year’s service in a government agency in return for scholarship aid?

Applicants are selected on the basis of their (1) academic records, (2) recommendations of school teachers or employers; (3) entrance tests, which include interviews with the director of the school and a psychiatrist; (4) physical examination, including chest X-Ray and basal metabolism test. We lose fewer students because they are unable to pass their class work than used to be true. We do have some students whose work is satisfactory, but who drop out because they find they do not like nursing.

We allow students to continue their training after they get married, and we accept married students occasionally. What should be the procedure about giving government scholarships to married applicants? Will it help to increase the enrollment if we encourage wives of men in active service to enter nursing schools for the duration? They could be released when peace comes.

Head Nurse Course

We also offered a course for head nurses. They enrolled in the class which has been given for several years for head nurses, and through federal funds we secured an instructor who supervised the ward experience of those enrolled in the course. We believe that this program, which extended over one semester, helped to strengthen the program for teaching and supervising students in their clinical work.

Refresher Course

Federal assistance was also secured for the refresher course. We do not feel that this was a particularly successful venture, in our case. We had a certain amount of publicity and offered the refresher course at two different times, assisted by federal funds. Only nine enrolled in the first course and seven in the second, and a total of nine actually completed the courses. Many of the women who enrolled for the course had been out of nursing for twenty years. Their original professional training was quite inadequate, and because of their age, their physical condition was also a problem.

To summarize our own limited experience, we believe that federal aid has been particularly valuable for the basic course, since it made it possible to accept more students than usual and to maintain our educational standards with an increased teaching load. The financial assistance was helpful, not only to the school, but also, it made it possible for students to enter who could not otherwise have met the fees.

We also believe that the assistance for the advanced training for the graduate nurses in the head nurse program was particularly valuable. We must face the fact that we have more inexperienced people carrying responsibility at this time, and that they, therefore, need more specific training.

We plan to give the refresher course again if and when we have an adequate number of really desirable applicants who wish to take the course.

How Federal Funds for Nursing Education Are Being Used at St. Mary’s Hospital, Duluth

Sister M. Mona, R.N., Director of Nurses, St. Mary's Hospital, Duluth, Minnesota

Last October sixteen additional student nurses were admitted to the nursing department of the College of St. Scholastica, Duluth, Minnesota, by means of a federal grant issued under the provisions of Public Law 146 Training for Nurses Act, United States Public Health Service.

When the announcement was made that many more nurses were needed and that federal funds would be made available for nursing education, we decided to do our part by taking twenty additional student nurses in our school, and filed an application with the Federal Security Administration requesting funds for this number of students. The Federal Government accepted this application and approved an allotment of funds for sixteen students amounting to $7,800.

As the students were to be admitted for the fall semester and the college was to register its upper classmen before September 20, action that would insure recruitment was imperative. Accordingly, the promotion department set to work giving publicity to the national need for nurses, the federal plan for financing their education, and the program of studies planned for their training at the College of St. Scholastica in conjunction with St. Mary’s Hospital. The issue was publicized in the local and diocesan newspapers, visits were made to local junior colleges, and about one hundred letters were written to deans of women in junior colleges and state teachers’ colleges of the vicinity.

This action brought a most gratifying response. In brief, within three weeks' time we received twenty-eight applications from students who had completed two or more years of college work and who expressed a desire to become nurses. Of these twenty-eight applicants the sixteen having the highest scholarship rating and best recommendations were accepted. No student was admitted to the class who was already enrolled in college classes or who had no need of government funds to continue her education.

Altogether the plan has worked out in a way that is very satisfactory. Our relations with the federal nursing committee have been most agreeable. The sixteen young women love their work and give promise of becoming excellent nurses; and we are happy in the thought that, by this service, we are all making an additional contribution to the health and defense of the nation in these difficult times.
The Use of Federal Funds for Nursing Education at Homer G. Phillips Hospital, St. Louis

Estelle M. Riddle, R.N., Superintendent of Nurses, Homer G. Phillips Hospital, St. Louis, Missouri

As soon as the announcement was issued relative to the probability of the Federal Government extending financial aid to nursing schools, a special faculty luncheon was arranged for March 11, 1941, including all special lecturers, superintendent and medical director of the hospital, and the chairman of the Municipal Nurses’ Board, to discuss "What Can and Should Homer G. Phillips Hospital do for national defense?"

This group considered the pros and cons relative to expansion of our school. Such questions were raised as: "Aren’t there too many nurses now?" "What will this cost the city?" "How will we house additional nurses when the residence is already overcrowded?" "Are our teaching facilities adequate?" "What will happen to the program if the Federal Government withdraws suddenly?" et cetera.

Such discussion helped to bring some of our major problems to a focus. The group agreed that we should do our share and expressed a willingness to cooperate to the fullest, with the understanding that cooperation might mean teaching the same subject two or more times.

Our application was on file before Congress appropriated the money. We were ready to swing into action when the formal application forms were sent us. The chairman of our board took the complete application form to the Director of Public Welfare. After his approval was obtained, the request was sent to Washington, D. C.

Our plan called for one additional instructor, one supervisor, four additional head nurses, outside living stipends for twenty-eight graduate nurses who were moved out to accommodate students, and funds for recreation, travel, and a library.

Seventy students were admitted in September, when we ordinarily would have admitted thirty-four. For laboratory courses the class was divided into four groups (for nursing arts). The medical and surgical supervisors were appointed assistant nursing arts instructors to work with the two full-time nursing arts instructors. We find this plan highly satisfying, as it gives the medical and surgical supervisors their first contact with the new students in the classroom setting, and tends to lessen the gap between what is taught in the classroom and their experience on the ward.

Seven students withdrew for various personal reasons, and three were eliminated at the end of the preclinical period. Fifty-five were capped in February.

We plan to continue expanding our school if certain difficulties we have experienced in handling our federal grant through the city comptroller’s office can be eliminated.

The new budget will be different from our first, but salaries for personnel added last year must be continued and some additions made. Our housing problem will be more acute, so more graduates will be moved out. Living costs have mounted substantially since our last budgeting, making necessary the request for a more ample outside living stipend. Our food budget will have to be supplemented by federal funds.

There can be, however, a reduction in one or two other requests made last year.

Instead of one large class as last year, the faculty has voted to admit two classes of thirty-five students each next year. We feel our facilities lend themselves best for use with smaller groupings. We are now endeavoring to recruit college graduates for the September 1942 class. So far the response is favorable. We plan to include a request for scholarships in our budget this year.

EDUCATION AND THE DEFENSE OF DEMOCRACY
T. V. Smith, Professor of Philosophy, The University of Chicago, Chicago, Illinois

An Abstract of Mr. Smith’s Address

Education seeks to make clear the ideals which light the lives of men and to inculcate the skills that make these ideals as effective as possible in action. The ideals of a liberal life have for centuries been summarized under three heads: truth, beauty, goodness. Education is concerned with making clear what these ideals mean, what their history has been, and how their future may be made most secure. Education seeks also in every present need to make these ideals as available as possible in action.
For purposes of practice, education, therefore, becomes devotion to science as the pathway to truth; to art as the pathway to beauty; and to policies as the pathway to goodness.

The more we emphasize science, the more we develop openness of mind, suspense of judgment, and tolerance of inquiry. This is the meaning of democracy on the intellectual side, and this development is the best defense of our way of life. Truth comes as the end-product of such training of citizens.

The more we emphasize art, the more we develop mobility of imagination, sensitivity to suggestion, and elegance of communication. This is the meaning of democracy on the aesthetic side, and this development is the best defense of our way of life. Beauty comes as the end-product of such training of citizens.

The more we participate in politics, the more we develop appreciation of the other fellow, sensitivity to opposing interests, and tolerance of human variety. This is the meaning of democracy on the moral side. Goodness comes as the end-product of such training of citizens.

Our best educational defense of democracy is, therefore, a constant attack upon ignorance, which shuts men out from truth; upon insensitivity, which shuts men out from beauty; and upon intolerance, which shuts men out from goodness. While our men attack our attackers upon the field of battle, we defend our way of life by keeping alive its ideal values and keeping emphasized the means of these values.

THE NURSE'S BURDEN
(Apologies to Kip)

Take up the nurse's burden—
    Send forth the best ye breed—
Go bind yourselves to service
    To meet your patients' need;
To wait in every season,
    On fluttered folk and wild—
Your sick and frightened peoples,
    Half-adult and half-child.

Take up the nurse's burden—
    In patience to abide,
To flee the common error,
    To check the show of pride;
By open act and simple,
    A hundred times made plain,
To seek another's profit,
    And charge to joy your gain.
Take up the nurse’s burden—
The work of war and peace—
Stop now the plague of ignorance,
Bid now the sickness cease;
And when your goal is nearest
The end for others sought,
Watch sloth and human folly
Bring all your work to nought.

Take up the nurse’s burden—
No fawdry rule of kings,
But toil of serf and nurse-maid—
The tale of common things.
The homes ye shall not enter,
The roads ye shall not tread,
Go save them for the living,
Go share with them their dread.

Take up the nurse’s burden—
And reap her fine reward:
The praise of those ye better,
The thanks of those ye guard—
The cry of patients humored
(Ah, slowly!) toward the light:—
"You’ve rescued us from suffering, You’ve saved us from the night!"

Take up the nurse’s burden—
Ye dare not stoop to less—
Nor call too loud on doctors
To share your weariness;
By all ye look or whisper,
By all ye leave or do,
Your quiet observant patients
Shall weigh your work and you.

Take up your war-time burden—
Have done with peaceful days—
The lightly proffered laurel,
The easy ungrudged praise,
Comes now to search your service
Through all the future years,
Cold, edged with dear-bought wisdom,
The WAR: its fears, its hopes, its tears.
For many years Mr. Lawrence Saunders has given the Walter Burns Saunders medal in memory of his father, a friend to nurses and nursing. When he established the award he stated that he had two purposes in so doing, first to arouse within the profession itself a fuller appreciation of the meritorious work of its individual members and, second, to awaken the consciousness of the public to the splendid work of the nursing profession as a whole and to the outstanding work of certain individuals.

As a member of the Committee on Award, Mr. Saunders suggested the name of an individual to whom he thought the medal should be given this year. The committee, the other members of which are the Presidents of the American Nurses' Association, National League of Nursing Education, and National Organization for Public Health Nursing, were pleased with the suggestion, but were faced by a difficulty, the magnitude of which was such as to make them ask Mr. Saunders to agree to a modification of his suggestion. With characteristic generosity Mr. Saunders acceded and a final unanimous decision and expansion of the idea was made. So tonight there will be two awards, not to individuals but to groups since it was quite impossible to single out one person more meritorious than the rest.

Ever since 1901 the nurses of the Army Nurse Corps have been an integral part of the Army, and since 1908 nurses of the Navy Nurse Corps have belonged to the Navy, as much as have sailors and officers.

They have been under orders subject to duty wherever they might be sent. They have served in many parts of the world, in our territorial possessions, and in many states of the Union. Up to the time of the first World War neither corps was large and the duties of the members were very little different from those of nurses in civilian life. They cared for sick and injured soldiers, sailors, and officers, and took care of their families.

The story of what they did in the last war is well known. Thousands of young nurses from civilian life joined the Army and Navy and served with the troops. Thousands worked in camps in this country and thousands more served in England, France, Siberia, and the area of occupation in Germany. Some hundred of these were away from their homes for over two years.

Throughout its history in peace and war, the record of the two nurse corps was of the highest. Army and Navy nurses have built up a reputation for efficiency, loyalty, and dependability that is unsurpassed. Only recently Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, United States Representative from Massachusetts, said in a radio address:

"For many years our Army has had its Army Nurse Corps and it has been an exemplary service. There has never been an attack upon it, nor has there been a word of reproach uttered against it. The corps is now indispensable and is an honor to the profession it serves."
She might have said the same about the Navy Nurse Corps. In peacetime the drama in the lives of these service women resembles that of nurses in civilian hospitals and homes. They are ready in emergencies. They are steady, comforting, and efficient when handling individual casualties and collective calamities in line of duty. They welcome the newborn and are on hand to make the gates of death less dreaded. Their services are just taken for granted, but the most hard-bitten old sailor or soldier is glad to give himself over to their care when laid low by sickness or accident.

Wartime service is different. It is round the clock. It is heroism. It is characterized by indifference to physical comfort and normal living. Most of us believe we can rise to heights of courage and feats of endurance in even longer-than-ordinary hours of duty. If we can just go back to our own orderly, clean rooms and our comfortable beds at night.

But the nurses in war do not have those satisfactions. They are dressed alike and wear the same things all the time with no relief into mufti. They have little, or no privacy; they cannot surround themselves with the pretty things they love; they eat meals that are nourishing enough, but lack variety and dainty touches. But how they stood up to these things and the hard work in the last war! In mobile and evacuation hospitals, in rain and mud, in heat and cold, often in the face of enemy action, they carried on, staying on duty long, long hours when necessary. At base hospitals they fought epidemics, nursed sick men back to health and helped doctors put together the broken pieces of wounded men, glad and proud that they had been chosen as worthy to serve with our fighting forces.

Not one of the 23,000 nurses in the last war, nor one of the thousands now in the Army and Navy was drafted. Every single one volunteered. Each decided for herself where her duty lay. Each has shouldered for herself her share of the burden of winning this war. Each has felt it her privilege to share all the dangers and discomforts of war with the men of the country. Each has said "Thank God, I'm fit; I'm fitted to do my job and I can take it."

And now from what our memories tell us of the last war and from the meager accounts that are coming through to us from all the corners of the globe, we are beginning to learn what the real heroism of our Army and Navy nurses is today. Our minds follow them to Alaska, Panama, Trinidad, Newfoundland, Iceland, and to England, Ireland, and to Australia, and to the Philippines, Hawaii, Guam, and New Caledonia; to hospital ships, to the hospitals on air fields and in camps and naval stations all over this great country. But no imagination can take us to the place where some of our Army and Navy sisters are: the prison camps of Kobe, Japan, and the prison conditions of Corregidor. We have known a little of the hardships and dangers nurses have endured in the fox holes of Bataan and in Hawaii, and on ships and clippers carrying the wounded and evacuees to areas of safety. Letters and newspapers have given us all too brief accounts, but of the brave women taken prisoners we know almost nothing. We bow our heads in sorrow and pray that God will give them strength and courage, believing that even in their darkest hours they will be sustained by hope and faith. Because they are Army and Navy nurses, they will be true to the heroic traditions of their services.

We, their sisters, and we of the old Army and Navy, long to let them know we are thinking of them, not only the nurses who are prisoners, but all who are in danger, all who endure discomfort or hardships, and all who are carrying on wherever they are needed. We envy them and only wish we might be with them through it all.

And so with the hope that the awards tonight will bring a consciousness of the deep appreciation on the part of their professional colleagues, and be a source of inspiration to them the committee has asked the Surgeon General of the Army and the Surgeon General of the Navy to designate a member of his respective Corps to accept on its behalf one medal to the heroic nurses of the Army and one medal to the heroic nurses of the Navy.

It is my proud privilege, therefore, to present these medals for distinguished services in the cause of nursing to you Colonel Flikke for the Army Nurse Corps, and to you Miss Towse for the Navy Nurse Corps.

Response by Colonel Flikke, R.N.

On behalf of the Army Nurse Corps, I accept this medal with deep appreciation. The Surgeon General, I am sure, will make appropriate arrangements for its safe keeping. I look forward to having it prominently displayed in the offices of the Corps in Washington.

Response by Miss Towse, R.N.

I am sure that the members of the Navy Nurse Corps will be as deeply moved as I am by this recognition of their services. Admiral McIntyre, our Surgeon General, will I know be happy to provide for the appropriate custody of this medal.

Preparing the Nurse for Participation in the National Social Hygiene Program

CARRIE B. MCNEILL, R.N., Director of Education, School of Nursing, Presbyterian Hospital, Chicago, Illinois

It is an honor to be asked to speak on the same program with Dr. Bertha Shafer, but to be asked to speak on any aspect of social hygiene is like asking one who has been occupied with close work to raise his eyes and describe the objects in a broader field of vision. The focus is not immediately clear and the description imperfect.

One could not have been in contact with Dr. Schafer as many years as I have been without catching some of her enthusiasm and being convinced of the validity of her cause. Her efforts to combat syphilis antedate by many years the promotion of social hygiene to first of public health problems. I have observed her in her early medical practice, taking blood or spinal fluid for diagnosis. I have watched her administer arsenicals. Later I have heard her address a parent-teacher group on sex education of children and, at the conclusion of the speech, answer convincingly the many questions of mothers. Still later, I have heard her lecture to student nurses on syphilis and gonorrhea, giving them their introduction to the historical and clinical aspects of those diseases. Finally I have heard her, as one of a group of lecturers, give to student nurses the meaning of the present social hygiene program. She has lived the social hygiene program.

That may explain the reason for my saying that, when we speak of preparing the nurse for participation in the social hygiene program, we speak narrowly in using the word "nurse." In speaking of a program with implications as broad as those of social hygiene, we cannot separate so readily the professional from the individual personality. We consider a profession apart from the individual undertaking it. Our group of young students to whom we are teaching the principles of nursing and offering the lamp of Florence Nightingale is a cross-section of the social hygiene program. They are a part of the age group for whom it is set up. They are the potential mothers of the next generation. They are the potential teachers of health of the next generation. Those who direct them have a twofold problem, first, that of making them better women, and then, better nurses. The task is heightened in this period of war because of the strong emotional forces which have been released by war, and which add difficulty to direction. But because it is a period of war, and because this young group lies within the larger group of whom it is said that during war there is an inevitable increase in venereal disease, our obligation to the task is more binding.

In preparing our students, we must take our lead from the program which has been offered us by the American Social Hygiene Association. We must assure ourselves of a measure of sex education within our student group, sufficient to insure a comfortable and normal adjustment to any teaching situation or experience they may be called upon to meet during their nursing course. Our groups come to us with varied backgrounds of culture and education. Some have had their full measure of help in growing up to an understanding of life and its forces; others have worried along by themselves, and bring an accumulation of conflicts which will greatly hamper their development. I believe that there should be direct effort in teaching personal hygiene, to give the truths of sex education that have foundation in the facts of anatomy and physiology which are being taught during the same period. There are books designed for this purpose which can be made available for reading, for there are some whose early training has led to a deep-seated reticence on sex, which does not readily respond to class instruction. A common knowledge of a subject which is normally the most important to our age group will promote discussion. For any who are interested or who may have experienced the same difficulty of selection that we have, I offer the following list, which has seemed to us properly graded to meet the need and answer the questions of adolescents of our group:

Growing Up .................................................Carl de Schweinitz
New Patterns in Sex Teaching
Love at the Threshold .....................................Frances Bruce Strain
Sex Guidance and Teaching
Step by Step in Sex Education ..........................Edith Hale Swift, M.D.
Attaining Womanhood
Attaining Manhood ........................................George W. Corner, M.D.
The Adolescent ............................................A. H. Arlitt
A Girl Grows Up ...........................................Ruth Fedder

May I at this time include the titles of several books on the broad subject of social hygiene, which are valuable references for the student later in her nursing course:

Social Hygiene .............................................Long and Goldberg
Shadow on the Land .....................................Thomas Parran, M.D.
Social Hygiene Nursing Techniques ......................Nadine Geitz, R.N.

During this earlier preclinical period in the nursing course, personality problems will arise which should be under the guidance of some one suited to the responsibility. For those schools which work with personality inventories, these problems may be anticipated and partially understood before they become a fact. Otherwise, observation of the student must point the way to her need. All effort should be made during this period of orientation to the nursing situation, in working towards an individual and collective emotional stability and social adjustment. If this can be accomplished we shall have given a basic preparation in social hygiene.

At this point, let us turn again to the broad preventive program. There must be provision for recreation for adolescent groups and for student groups, particularly. What does our own Curriculum Guide say of the extra-professional program? First in Section 5, Part 1, but in greater detail on page 534 it states as follows:

"It should be considered an essential part of her educational development. . . . The extra-professional program has to do with her all-round development as an individual and with the inception and continuation of those general educational interests which contribute to the broadening and enrichment of her life. . . . The student nurse needs leisure more than most students, because of the physical and emotional strains which are inseparable from her work with sick people. . . . The selection of leisure-time pursuits necessitates a series of choices for which many persons are unprepared. All schools must accept this challenge, but especially schools where students are in residence. . . . The extra-professional program has a definite contribution to make to the constantly developing personality of the student nurse."

I believe it has a definite contribution to make in the preparation of the nurse for the social hygiene program.Fortunate is the school that has a recreation director; but lacking one, a well-organized student association with the impetus of faculty interest and backing, can effectively direct its own spare time and energy.

Early in the clinical period we must further our design for living by a course in psychology which considers the individual primarily; and her behavior through the years from birth to maturity, the trinity of body, mind, and emotion. The aspect of causation and adjustment of behavior, the problems which arrest the progress to maturity should have a definitely personal implication, that each one may go about setting in order her own house of personality. By so doing she will come first to an awareness, and then to a measure of understanding of the infinite possibilities of success and failure which are open to all. The instructor of this course has a key position in guidance, and should bring to the task more than a superficial textbook approach if the full measure of growth is to be insured the student. There must be a depth of understanding and friendliness, utter honesty and great tolerance, to break down the reserves of the young group, and to stimulate active discussion on questions which are of vital interest to all, such as emotional antipathies, racial prejudices, religion, sex. There are numbers of subjects too frequently thrashed over with emotion, and too rarely clarified without assistance, because of emotion. How does this prepare for the social hygiene program? By giving a knowledge of self, an understanding of forces at work within herself and within groups, and an intimation of how the personality with its quirks and cranks has grown. With this there is an implication of future objectives and growth.

If we have given generously to our students' personalities in their earlier courses, we shall follow through effectively in our professional preparation of nurses for the social hygiene program.

With the clinical period comes the introduction to venereal diseases as such. The organisms have been studied in bacteriology, and there is likely some background of acquaintance gleaned in various quarters; but the clinical aspects outlined with the objective of professional understanding are set down for the first time. Whether the clinical discussion should be given early in the medical and surgical nursing courses, should wait on the discussion of communicable diseases, or should be coupled with dermatology, can best be decided by the individual school; but that it should be early enough to be basic for integration throughout the later curriculum, I am convinced. I can too well remember my own experience: learning of the Spirochaeta pallida in bacteriology, gastric crisis in medical nursing, gumma and syphilitic bony involvement in surgical nursing, paresis and the Argyll Robertson pupil in nervous and mental nursing, snuffles and still births in obstetrics, Hutchinson teeth in pediatrics; and finally in my senior year, trying to gather all the pieces together when syphilis was finally presented as an entity in dermatology. I believe we may still suffer a bit on the side of that error.

If we give adequate preparation in this early and basic discussion, the manifestations of syphilis which appear as complicating conditions in every special field of medicine will be added to the sum, clearly and naturally, and will serve to bind the whole.

There is further and more important integration to be accomplished. What psychology has meant in the understanding of individual personality, sociology should insure in the understanding of stresses and strains which are operative in social groups, such as the disruption of the family by venereal disease, the loss of earning power due to venereal disease, the tribute exacted by venereal disease, in the costs of insanity and dependence. These are social problems. They call for an answer on what is to be done, and I can see a place in such a course for a discussion of the preventive program from its social aspect.

Many of us still think of social hygiene in terms of lectures on venereal diseases—giving cause, etiology, symptoms, diagnosis, treatment, and prevention—and have not yet visioned the crusade to master the disease as other diseases have been mastered before. It is not enough that we observe the most conscientious integration of social hygiene teaching throughout the curriculum. At some point there is the necessity to activate in our students a strong personal and professional sense of responsibility toward the broad program of prevention sponsored by the American Social Hygiene Association through its state and local organizations, and upheld by the United States Public Health Service. They must feel the need of educating the public away from the old hush-hush moral attitude toward venereal infection. They must see the possibility of a future free of the tribute which syphilis exacts in health and in fortune. They must accept for their future teaching a simple and progressive explanation of sex, so that those whom they are given to guide, find an understanding of life in adolescence. This accomplished, they have in fact become a part of the program.

I am not entirely clear as to placement of such a unit. For those schools that have the services of a trained and experienced public health worker, I believe the clearest expression of public health can be made at the time each subject to which it is related is taught. Effectively done, the necessity for teaching public health as a separate course to the undergraduate student is obviated, and much time and wasteful repetition saved. However, where the integration of public health cannot be carried out through the curriculum by an expert, I believe the efforts toward integration are likely to prove hazardous and inadequate. This leaves a need for a qualified special lecturer to give, at the close of the nursing course, a brief and clear-cut discussion of the problems, agencies, and nursing opportunities of public health.

Since 1939, we of the Chicago area have had made available to us the Illinois Social Hygiene League, just such a series of lectures which present the public health aspects of social hygiene, and the nursing responsibility under that program. We felt at the time, and still feel, that it is material designed for the older student who has begun to look beyond graduation, so that it has been offered in the senior year. At present we use it as a loosely related unit of public hygiene; but I am not at all satisfied that it should remain there. Be that as it may, each succeeding class has taken it in better stride. It has stimulated students to think beyond symptoms, diagnosis, treatment; and from the point of view of teaching, it has led to a check back on the earlier courses to insure adequate preparation. We mark a gain either way you look at it.

This discussion of preparation for the social hygiene program cannot be complete without some word of related practice. Within most hospitals, this cannot be easily separated into special practice, but must be accepted with the experience in each general or special department as one of the complicating factors in physical and social diagnosis. Those hospitals equipped with an out-patient department would seem to have all that could be desired for acquaintance of the student with the social problems involved, the need for case finding, the difficulties of follow-up, and it might be with the nursing techniques, if supervision were adequate. Public health affiliation might offer to the few a measure of experience in this special field.

We cannot escape the responsibility of preparing our students for the social hygiene program, any more than we can escape preparing them for life itself. In so far as we do a good or indifferent job of making them effective participants in life, just so far have we accomplished the more specific task of making them effective participants in the social hygiene program, quite aside from nursing techniques.

As the older group, our problem in accomplishing this end is to work increasingly toward a clearer understanding and greater tolerance of adolescents. We must learn to accept their evaluation of their own problems and not force our discount of those problems upon them. When and if we do this, we shall correspondingly enhance our power to guide and direct that generation which will inevitably take over, as our generation gives way.

May I borrow from Dr. Parran's Shadow On the Land his quotation from Dr. Milton Rosenau?

"Preventive medicine dreams of a time when there shall be enough for all, and every man shall bear his share of labor in accordance with his ability, and every man shall possess sufficient for the needs of his body and the demands of health. These things he shall have as a matter of justice and not of charity. Preventive medicine dreams of a time when there shall be no unnecessary suffering and no premature deaths; when the welfare of the people shall be our highest concern; when humanity and mercy shall replace greed and selfishness; and it dreams that all these things will be accomplished through the wisdom of man. Preventive medicine dreams of these things, not with hope that we, individually, may participate in them, but with the joy that we may aid in their coming to those who shall live after us. When young men have visions, the dreams of old men come true."

ROUND TABLE ON REFRESHER COURSES

Presiding: Edna B. Groppe, R.N., President, The Illinois State League of Nursing Education.

SUMMARY OF THE DISCUSSION

How to locate nurses interested in refresher courses?

The publicity regarding refresher courses was usually local and was through the alumnae organizations and well-placed advertisements or articles in local newspapers, radio spot announcements, and chiefly through the use of the inventory cards. In several states these cards have been made available to all district nurses' associations.

What requirements should be set up regarding high school education and state registration?

The consensus of opinion was that high school education should not be required if the nurse was eligible to meet the requirements for state registration. In the majority of programs state registration in some state by examination has been required. New York State requires registration or eligibility for registration in New York State. Michigan grants a temporary permit to nurses who are graduates of accredited schools, but who have not become registered on completion of a refresher course that has been given in Michigan. Where programs are planned for registered nurses only, guidance can be given to graduate nurses who have not taken state boards at some time, in helping them find tutors and preparing themselves to write the state board examination.

How complete a physical examination is required?

This requirement varies among the different programs. Some organizations accept physical examination by the family physician. In others the blood pressure is checked and a rather superficial physical examination given; and in other organizations the physical examination is very complete, including Wasserman, x-ray of the chest, and the immunization program.

How can the problem of adjusting the homemaker's time to the nursing situation be solved?

Miss Swenson, Director of the School of Nursing and Nursing Service, Miami Hospital, Dayton, Ohio, told the audience of a nursery school that had recently been established in the hospital. This nursery school is developed through the volunteers of the occupational therapy department, one of whom had nursery school experience, and the volunteers are supplemented by the personnel and students of the pediatric staff. The hospital furnishes the facilities, which at present are set up for pre-school children but not for infants requiring formulas. The hospital charges fifty cents a day or seven dollars and fifty cents a month for the cost of nourishment to the child. The program is operated on a twenty-four hour basis and has now been extended to the paid professional personnel of the school. The mother is required to take the temperature of the child prior to bringing the child to the nursery school. The administrator needs to appreciate the fact that the refresher student may have family obligations that must be kept in mind when the refresher student is interested in employment, and that it is important for the nursing staff to appreciate that this supplementing by the part-time worker and consideration of her hours of assignment are necessary if additional professional care is to be given to the patients.

How can the students be given the best clinical experience correlated with the best methods of nursing care?

Preferably take advantage of federal funds and employ a full-time person, who will be responsible for the program. This person could care for twenty students, or if the program was planned on a six-day week of alternating days, she could care for forty students. It is important that the head nurse and supervisor be interested in the program and also interested in the teaching, since they will need to help with the day's assignment in order that the students can be assured opportunity of caring for types of patients with conditions and having treatments and medications that have been taught in the classroom.

ROUND TABLE ON THE SIMPLIFICATION OF NURSING PROCEDURES

Presiding: Mildred Montag, R.N., Assistant to the Director, Nurse Testing Division, Psychological Corporation, New York, New York.

Participants: Thelma Dodds, R.N., Margaret Filson, R.N., and Dorothy Rusby, R.N.

The participants were introduced and the discussion opened by the chairman. The reason for the interest in this subject at the present time is not that nurses have just realized that procedures need simplification but rather that external conditions, such as lack of personnel and the decrease in the products ordinarily used in both hospitals and homes, have forced some changes in techniques. That we must actually revise and simplify procedures is desirable although the war conditions which make it necessary are not.

There seemed to be agreement among the participants concerning the need for the simplification of techniques. The next question discussed was, how should they be simplified. It was suggested that the teaching of procedures should center around the teaching of principles on which the procedure rested rather than upon specific details. The students would thus be encouraged to think and to modify the procedures to meet the situation and the needs of the patient. Visiting nurses do this in caring for the sick in the home, and they also teach new public health nurses on this same basis. Such teaching would enable the student to see the need for variations in technique and would not assume that any one procedure was the safest and best.

Studies have been made in order to develop better procedures and these have been fairly numerous, though few have been published. As a consequence, the results of the studies are usually available only in the institution in which they are carried on, and other institutions either repeat the work or more often continue their own procedures quite unaware of the studies. In one large institution numerous time and motion studies done under the direction of mechanical engineers have shown that not only are better and safer techniques evolved but also that economy of time and money have resulted. It was urged that the studies already done be used more widely.

Nurses have apparently been somewhat reluctant to take the initiative in procedure revision and simplification but it seems imperative that if nursing is to be considered a profession it must assume certain responsibilities as well as enjoy certain privileges. One of these responsibilities is the construction of techniques which have to do with the hygienic care of patients. Certain other techniques require the collaboration of other specialists, such as doctors, bacteriologists, physiologists, physicists, psychologists, and the like. Since all nurses who carry out the techniques or have anything to do with the teaching or supervision of them should have a voice in their construction, a committee to revise, construct, and simplify techniques seems indicated. Inasmuch as students should be taught the principles on which techniques rest, and should also be taught modifications to suit certain situations, they too should be encouraged to think critically and to offer suggestions if they are to develop those powers which they must exercise as graduates.

When the discussion was opened to the audience, there seemed to be much interest in the questions raised. A rather common request was to have the studies which have already been completed made available to all schools of nursing and hospitals. It was thought that the National League of Nursing Education might publish such studies or sponsor their publication and distribution so that more extensive use could be made of them. It was even suggested that the league put out a procedure book of simplified procedures based on good scientific principles. Some in the audience thought this might lead to standardization whereas what is wanted is the use of good basic principles. Many believe the head nurse should have a greater voice in procedure construction than seems now to be the case.

The chairman summarized the essential points before the meeting adjourned. The main points were:

1. Need for simplification of techniques is now greater than ever because of limited personnel and diminishing supplies
2. Procedures should be based on sound scientific facts and kept as simple as possible
3. The use of scientific studies, both those already completed and those to come, in the construction of techniques: for example, physiological, bacteriological, time, and motion
4. Need for publishing such studies in much greater number than is now being done. The suggestion was that the National League of Nursing Education might do this.

5. Need for nurses to take the responsibility for procedure revision

6. Many persons should be involved in the process of procedure revision: teachers, supervisors, head nurses, students, and in addition, experts in the various fields.

7. There seems to be some improvement in the teaching of procedures based on good principles, for the public health agencies find it comparatively easy to teach nurses the home modifications of nursing techniques.

ROUND TABLE ON FIRST AID AND EMERGENCY NURSING IN THE BASIC CURRICULUM

Presiding: Leila I. Given, R.N., Supervisor of Nursing Education and Secretary of Examining Board, Wisconsin.

The discussion was opened by the chairman who introduced the participants and reviewed the essential factors of the course in first aid and emergency nursing as outlined in A Curriculum Guide for Schools of Nursing. Mimeographed questions relating to the round table subject had previously been distributed to those who attended. These had been compiled from the questions submitted by the instructors of the course in twenty-five representative schools of nursing in the United States.

A summary of the main points brought out by the discussion follows:

1. Modification of this course as a whole is necessary if our students are to be ready to cope with the war emergencies which may confront them.

2. First aid and emergency nursing should be taught in the second semester of the first year at the time when the course in medical and surgical nursing is given. Emergency nursing can readily be incorporated into the latter course. Isolation of this course is not desirable.

3. The standard American Red Cross first aid course of twenty hours is the course which best meets our need. For the students who complete this course successfully, an advanced course of ten hours may be offered in the senior year. This should be on a voluntary basis because it would not seem feasible to increase the total hours in the curriculum at this time. A student taking the advanced course should be willing to give this time as part of her contribution to the war emergency program.

4. In any course in first aid between two-thirds and three-fourths of the time should be devoted to practice. Practice should include problem solving. A few suggestions are:
   a. Take an actual situation from a newspaper. Ask students to plan and give the emergency care.
   b. Use the examples in the instructor's textbook.
   c. Have students give skits or demonstrations at alumnac, district, and student organization meetings.
   d. Arrange for experience in an accident ward where adequate supervision is provided.
5. The instructor of this course should be a doctor or nurse who has been certified by the American Red Cross to teach first aid. Teaching ability and interest in the care of emergencies are prerequisites. A lay person could assist with this program, but there would be no particular advantage in having a lay instructor. If a certified instructor is not available, a member of the faculty who has had at least the standard course should be asked to teach the course in preference to an instructor without any preparation for it.

6. In the teaching of any course in first aid and emergency nursing today at least two hours should be devoted to the study of the civilian defense programs—national, state, and local. Instruction in gas warfare is also desirable if additional hours are available.

Discussion from the floor followed.

Closing Business Session
Friday, May 22, 2:00 p.m.

Presiding: Stella Goostray, R.N., President.
A resolution from the American Social Hygiene Association was presented which read as follows:

WHEREAS, In spite of tremendous efforts by official and voluntary agencies during the last war, the loss of time by soldiers from training and combat, due to syphilis and gonorrhea, was 6,804,818 man-days; and

WHEREAS, Prostitution is the main spreader of these diseases to civilians as well as to the armed forces; and

WHEREAS, Prostitution not only spreads diseases but also corruption to the morals of youth, to the stability of marriage and family life, and to the integrity of government; and

WHEREAS, This country is again engaged in a life-and-death struggle for which the services of every trained man and women are vital; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Association give its unqualified endorsement to all measures calculated to inculcate and maintain high standards of sex behavior, and to reduce prostitution and the spread of the venereal diseases, not only among the armed forces but also throughout the entire civilian population. Be it further

Resolved, That the state legislatures meeting in 1942 be urged by the Association to adopt such laws as may be necessary to provide ample legal measures for suppression of prostitution and to provide funds for proper enforcement of such laws.

It was voted that this resolution be adopted.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS

The forty-eighth annual convention of the National League of Nursing Education has been a stimulating one. It has brought the League to the beginning of its fiftieth year faced with new challenges unprecedented in its history.

The success of this meeting has been due to the efforts of many people, some of whom we know, and others who are unknown to us. We wish to thank them all at this time.

First, our thanks are given wholeheartedly to the Executive Secretary, Miss Claribel A. Wheeler, Chairman of the Convention Committee. Miss Wheeler’s gracious personality and devoted efforts in behalf of nursing education, through her many years of service to our organization, have meant much to us at all times. It is with a feeling of sincere regret that we see her present service to the League come to an end, and we wish for her much personal happiness in whatever she may do in the future.

The Program Committee planned wisely in bringing to us outstanding speakers and participants in discussions of great interest and moment at this time, as well as in arranging breakfasts, luncheons, teas, dinners, and special trips for our entertainment. The officers and committees of the National League of Nursing Education gave us much food for thoughtful consideration.

Our hostesses, the officers, directors, and members of the Illinois State League of Nursing Education and of the Chicago League of Nursing Education, together with the Arrangements Committee and the various subcommittees, planned carefully and painstakingly for our every comfort and happiness. Much groundwork was laid by many groups and individuals before our arrival, which insured smooth-running meetings after our coming.

These groups were aided in their plans by the management of the Stevens Hotel, and by the unfailing service and courtesy of the hotel employees, by the offerings of the educational and commercial exhibitors, by the Committee on Transportation and the railroad, bus, and air lines, who brought us safely to our destination, and by the newspapers and radio stations who gave publicity to our meetings.

To all of these and to many others, we give a grateful vote of thanks and appreciation for making this one of the most stimulating of League conventions.

Anne L. Austin, Chairman,
Mary L. Bogardus,
Lulu K. Wolf.

Registration

It was reported that 7,451 graduate nurses and 3,294 student nurses had attended the convention, making a total registration of 10,745.

Committee on Nominations for 1943

The members of the Committee on Nominations appointed by the President in accordance with the provisions of the by-laws 1 were:

Mrs. Mary Colby Monteith, California,
Mary E. Stuart, Louisiana.

Nominations from the floor were:
Ruth Colestock, Colorado,
Bernice Anderson, New Jersey,
Louise Knapp, Missouri.

1 By-laws—Article VII, Section 8. The Committee on Nominations. This committee shall consist of five members, two of whom shall be appointed by the Chair and three by the House.
REPORT OF TELLERS AND INSPECTORS OF ELECTION

The report was read by Miss Virginia Olcott, Chairman of the Tellers and Inspectors of Election. The report was accepted as presented and the chair declared the following officers and directors elected:

President
Stella Goosray, Boston, Massachusetts

Treasurer
Lucile Petry, Minneapolis, Minnesota

Directors
Nellie X. Hawkinson, Chicago, Illinois
Eugenia K. Spalding, Washington, D. C.
Henrietta Adams, Seattle, Washington
Frances Zeigler, Nashville, Tennessee

OTHER BUSINESS

Miss Goosray expressed her appreciation of the services on the Board, of Miss Effie Taylor and Miss Elizabeth Burgess, both of whom did not wish to have their names included on the ticket this year.

Miss Olcott again extended the invitation of the State of Washington to the League to hold its 1943 meeting there. Miss Goosray stated that the place of the next convention would be voted upon at the meeting of the new Board.

In closing, Miss Goosray said: "I do not think we can leave this meeting, although we have had a resolution expressing our gratitude to Miss Wheeler, without mentioning again that this is her last meeting with us in her official capacity. I don't believe it will be, or at least we all hope it won't be, her last meeting with us at our conventions, and after all the hard work she has done for the League—and she certainly has had a very hard winter—we hope she is going to have lots of time for play and we wish her everything that is good in the world.

"Now we come to the close of our meeting. We have had a week of very stimulating meetings. I have heard more than one person say it has been the best convention she has ever attended and I hope many of you will go away with the same feeling. I hope also that you are going away determined to do something about one or two things: First, to use your efforts to get everybody into the armed forces who is needed. We have a great responsibility there. Secondly, that you individually will make yourself responsible for getting into our good schools of nursing that 25 per cent more of students who are needed.

"In closing, I hope that each one of you will have a very profitable year. I know it is going to be a busy one, but we will all be thinking about each other and come back next year with new ideas to make our League go forward because, as I said at the opening meeting, we must come out of this crisis with a stronger League than we have ever had before. It is a year that would normally be one of rejoicing for we have begun our fiftieth year. Instead, it is going to be a time of great testing for us and I hope that we shall come through this year stronger than we have ever been before."

The convention was then declared adjourned.

Two all day conferences of members of state boards of nurse examiners sponsored by the American Nurses' Association and the National League of Nursing Education were held on Saturday, May 23, and Sunday, May 24, at the Stevens Hotel, Chicago, Illinois.
