has to be adaptable. She is definitely not employed to do housework, but, if the comfort of the patient requires some household service, she does it gladly.

Take the case of a mother in her middle thirties, who came home from the hospital with her new, ten-day-old baby. She had had a difficult delivery and had orders not to walk up and down stairs and to get as much rest as possible. She was fortunate enough to get a trained practical nurse, on twenty-hour duty, who made it possible for her to follow orders. The nurse gave the mother her trays upstairs, prepared the baby’s formula, bathed and fed the baby, did the baby’s washing, cleaned the mother’s room and bathroom, and cared for the baby during the night so that the mother might have her rest. There was a five-year-old daughter in the family who had to be fed and made ready for kindergarten and watched when she returned from school. This mother made a splendid recovery and enjoyed and appreciated all that the practical nurse did for her and her family. In these days of crowded, understaffed hospitals there are many other young mothers who need the services of the trained practical nurse when they come home with their week-old babies.

Now let us consider a chronic case. A trained practical nurse was called to care for an elderly man who had been badly burned in a home accident.
As time progressed, the patient gradually improved, but it was discovered that he would be crippled for life and in a wheel chair. During this time, the nurse cared only for the patient. Then disaster fell. The wife of the patient passed away, leaving no near relative who could take over her responsibilities. So now the nurse not only takes care of the patient but she manages the household, does the canning, and helps to keep the patient happy and contented. The nurse has been on this case over five years, taking a vacation of two weeks once a year when she can find a nurse to relieve her. How fortunate that man is to be able to stay in his own home. Without the practical nurse, it would not be possible. Think of all the little things a nurse must be able to do on a long-term case of this sort. Perhaps she must read to her patient, perhaps play gin rummy or checkers. All these little “extras” can do so much to make the patient happy. We want our practical nurses trained to give good bedside care, but we also want them equipped to give these little “extras.” I could cite case after case to show the variety of services we expect and receive from our trained practical nurses, but time does not permit.

With more and more small hospitals discontinuing their training schools for professional nurses, with the result that communities are finding themselves without adequate nursing service, we must have more trained practical nurses to help fill the gap. We need them to give bedside care in our hospitals, and we need them in our homes. We have a right to expect them to be adequately trained, and they have a right to have that training recognized through state licensure. Let us hope that new accredited schools will be started, that every state will require a license for the practical nurse, and that proper recognition will be given this growing, much-needed profession.
SPECIAL INTEREST CONFERENCE

SHOULD QUOTAS BE ESTABLISHED WHICH WOULD PERMIT A LIMITED NUMBER OF NEGRO PRACTICAL NURSES TO BE EMPLOYED?

BY ALMA VESSELS, R.N.

In any consideration of all programs for expanded nursing services, every person who might add to the effectiveness of the program in the community must be considered.

All during the war the question of quotas loomed large in almost every phase of military and civilian life. Because of them, many goals which were set were exceeded, others maintained, still others not met, depending upon the area of operation.

The ugly spectre of quotas, as related to the minority groups within our country, caused many unhappy incidents which should not be reiterated at this time. Unfortunately, however, we find many of the wartime patterns still in existence. The field of nursing did not escape the quota system, and in many areas we find, in spite of desperate shortages of nurses, Negro nurses are not being employed either because of color or a “quota” which operates against them.

Since nursing stands at the crossroads as a profession, and since this great gathering of professional nurses will in large measure determine the road we shall follow into the future, no stone should be left unturned to place the profession on the truly democratic road. It is significant to note that the State Board of Nurse Examiners in Alabama recently stated that Negro women are sharing equally in the courses which are being sponsored by the Board. This is, indeed, a step in the right direction.

In posing the question previously indicated, it is hoped that frank discussion will produce a sound answer. Such an answer will serve as a guide to those of us who are interested in breaking down any barriers which might present unwarranted hardships to any group of trained practical nurses whose services might be needed to provide the American people with adequate nursing care.

A PRIVATE DUTY NURSE LOOKS AT PRACTICAL NURSING

BY TERESA M. TULLY, R.N.

Private duty nurses are concerned with how much training practical nurses are to receive and just where the line is to be drawn between the duties of the prepared practical nurse and the professional nurse. The public will be confused when both can show licenses. The duties of each group should be carefully defined. What should be done about the many persons now working as practical nurses whose only preparation has been the fact of having taken care of an aged grandmother for a few months? Private duty nurses agree that there is a place for the practical nurse, but not in the care of the acutely ill patient. The work of a practical nurse should be supervised by a professional nurse. The practical nurse should not be placed by a professional nurses’ registry.

The Viewpoint of a Secretary of a State Board of Nurse Examiners

By Clara F. Brouse, R.N.

Although the need for the prepared practical nurse is evident in subacute illness, it is not an obligation of professional registered nurses to start schools or to recruit students for them. However, nurse educators should teach in any schools established for training practical nurses. Twenty states license practical nurses, but only eight states have schools. Evidently, courses are unpopular or seem unnecessary, as so few practical nurses expend time and money to prepare themselves.

Only prepared practical nurses should be granted state licenses, or the public is defrauded. To license all who nurse for hire does not guarantee good or even safe nursing care. Many women call themselves practical nurses and about 90,000 work in hospitals, but less than 7,000 have ever been examined by state boards.

Local control is safer than state license. Prepared practical nurses’ duties, responsibilities, and status should be very clearly defined, if they are employed in hospitals where student nurses are trained. Duties should be assigned according to preparation, salaries should depend upon ability, and uniforms should be distinctive.

Hospital nurses’ aides should be taught on the job in the institutions employing them permanently. They should not be prepared or licensed to practice independently.

Because agencies caring for the sick or promoting health need cheap labor is no reason why professional nurses should increase the prestige of partially prepared nurses.

A profession is loyal to its own members and works for their advancement and improvement. Its leaders should refuse to emphasize the importance of a subsidiary group which for years, with almost no preparation, has assumed the gravest responsibilities in the care of the sick.

To get present Ohio figures, I sent a questionnaire to the 266 hospitals and related institutions listed by the American Medical Association. Responses came from 164, which contain 64,149 of Ohio’s 68,293 beds and bassinets. Without counting student nurses, the final tabulation showed 4754 registered nurses employed and 4685 other bedside personnel (3865 women and 820 men). Of this last group only 909 women had preparation as follows:
The other 2956 women employed had only ward teaching at the bedside.

THE NEED FOR PREPARED PRACTICAL NURSES IN PSYCHIATRIC NURSING

BY LAURA W. FITZSIMMONS, R.N.

That the need for prepared practical nurses in mental hygiene and psychiatric nursing is an acute one today, no one can dispute. There are few graduate nurses prepared in psychiatric nursing, and budgets of many of the large state hospitals often are too limited to employ those who might be available. Therefore we are to a great extent depending upon attendants, and many of those are utterly untrained. I, for one, would welcome a corps of prepared practical nurses and feel that the care of the mental patient would be greatly improved if they were available.

Many of the professional nurses seem concerned over increasing the supply of practical nurses, on the assumption that this would create a threat to the professional nurse. There are doubtless in this audience many who felt the same alarm when the supply of professional nurses was so tremendously increased under the Bolton Act which created the Cadet Nurse Corps. Yet some of those very nurses are today tenaciously holding to those senior cadets and protesting at detaching them to other hospitals for experience, because they are so desperately needed in their own institutions. When it is realized that there are mental hospitals in this country with over a thousand patients to one registered professional nurse, it is apparent that not in our lifetime will there be an over-supply of nurses for this increasing demand. Consequently, I urge you to give support to the preparation of the practical nurse, that we may have a greater body of soldiers in the battle, lest we lose the fight.

In closing the meeting Miss Phillips said: "I would like to leave with you the thought expressed by Miss Petry at the beginning of the hour: our ultimate responsibility as nurses and our very great opportunity as nurses rest with our desire and our ability to develop and inaugurate very soon workable plans for meeting the demands for nursing service, which will continue to be greater than ever before."
SPECIAL BUSINESS MEETING TO DISCUSS THE STRUCTURE STUDY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1946—8:00-9:00 A.M.

At 8:05 A.M. the president called to order this second special business meeting, held to discuss the two plans under consideration for the structure study.

The roll call indicated that members of twenty-one state leagues were present.*

After a showing of hands to ascertain how many state leagues anticipated being represented at the Friday morning business session indicated that a quorum would be present, it was decided to postpone the voting for the representatives on the enlarged Structure Study Committee until then.

The president introduced Dr. William Cherin, of the Raymond Rich Associates. Dr. Cherin asked the assemblage if it would prefer that he emphasize educational questions or discuss the major differences between the two plans. The latter was indicated.

The great difference between the two plans is that of membership. Plan I, which calls for a single organization—the American Nursing Association—admits to membership nonprofessional as well as professional nurses, though certain spheres of activity are reserved for professional nurses only—the International Council of Nurses; the National Academy of Nurses; the specialty boards of sections; and collective bargaining units on the district and state levels. Furthermore, fellows in the academy and members of specialty boards must be professional nurses who are qualified specialists in the fields represented by the respective sections. Both plans include sections, commissions, the academy, and the district and state organizations.

Plan II sets up two organizations, the American Nurses’ Association, to which only professional nurses would belong, and the National Organization for Nursing Service, with both nurse and non-nurse members. Under either plan a National Nursing Center, a nonprofit corporation to operate the pooled and combined major services of the two organizations, would be set up. Under Plan II this would also be the co-ordinating unit between the two organizations. As set up in both Plan I and Plan II, this National Nursing Center would not be a policy-making body, but a service organization. If there should be two organizations, the professional group would need a small staff to handle certain association activities.

In reply to a comment that in other professional organizations participation by lay persons does not entitle them to membership, Dr. Cherin said it should be borne in mind that lay membership includes the allied professions, the people from whom assistance of a technical nature is needed, whose advice and participation is of great value and in most cases absolutely necessary.

from the point of view of attainment of the goals of nursing. He urged that, instead of following the pattern set by other professional organizations, the nursing profession create a new pattern that will be useful first to nursing and second to the people of the United States. He pointed out that it would be possible to limit participation by lay members in all sorts of ways, including the provision that no lay member should be eligible for election to the house of delegates or to the boards of directors, etc.

To the objection that the proposed name of one of the elements in Plan II—"American Nurses' Association"—was unfortunate because of its implication that the primary function of the organization would be interest in nurses rather than in nursing, Dr. Cherin said that in the constitutional convention the name preferred by the membership would be chosen.

Regarding the educational implications of the plans, Dr. Cherin said that the leading commission in both organization plans is the Commission on Education containing four sub-groups—on curriculum, measurement and testing, accreditation, and counseling and guidance. The Commission on Education would be made up of representatives from the various sections, preferably representatives of the Committee on Education of the specialty sections. Thus, education would become the concern of the whole body of the organization. Since every nurse would be a member of one of the sections, there would be an opportunity to interest nurses—and in the case of Plan I, to interest the lay members who join those sections—in the problems and needs of education.

There is also provision for a Commission on Educational Facilities. The two commissions were separated because it was felt that the problems of getting enough schools that could be accredited, and dealing with their physical constitution, their administration, their distribution, etc., was a big enough field to require special cultivation at this time.

The National Academy of Nurses would be primarily a body to promote the interests of high standards of education. Educational interests, also, would be taken care of by many of the bureaus at the National Nursing Center. The Bureau of Research might serve many different types of educational projects; the Bureau of Public Information would handle information problems on education, etc. It would be hoped, too, that the library in the Center might meet the needs of nursing education. International Service would deal with educational problems on the international plane, and the Field Service would assist schools in measuring up to the standards of education that the professional association sets, etc.

The possibility that any one group, such as non-nurses, would deter desirable action in any direction was thought by Dr. Cherin to be very small, for the whole question of balance and decentralization of power was uppermost in planning the structural phases of the organization. He said there was no possibility of any group within the organization, whether nurses or non-nurses, establishing a hegemony in the organization; the sections break up the power relation and balance it, and it would be necessary for a group of persons to gain control of at least seven of the sections in order to dominate the organization.

Dr. Cherin was asked if each structural unit would have representatives in the National Nursing Center. He replied that it is suggested that each commission and section and the National Academy have its own minimum staff, but that the pooled and common services should be established in the National Nursing Center. The various bureaus would be under the supervision of bureau committees that would decide priorities on the services of the Center.

The meeting adjourned at 9:00 A.M.

JOINT SESSION

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1946—9:00-11:30 A.M.

Presiding: RUTH SLEEPER, R.N., president of the National League of Nursing Education and director of the school of nursing and nursing service of the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, Mass.

COMMON DENOMINATORS IN NURSING EDUCATION

PART I: A SYMPOSIUM

Chairman: HENRIETTA ADAMS LOUGHRAN, R.N., director of the school of nursing of the University of Colorado, Boulder, Colo.

Participants: AGNES LOVE, R.N., instructor in surgical nursing of the University of Minnesota School of Nursing, Minneapolis, Minn.; MARY S. TSCHUDIN, R.N., educational director of the Harborview Division of the University of Washington School of Nursing, Seattle, Wash.; RUTH W. HUBBARD, R.N., general director of the Visiting Nurse Society, Philadelphia, Penn.; RUTH P. KUEHN, dean of the University of Pittsburgh School of Nursing, Pittsburgh, Penn.; HENRIETTA DOLTZ, director of nursing education of the University of Oregon, Portland, Ore.

RUTH SLEEPER pointed out that all educators are concerned with advanced nursing education and with accreditation in some form and that those organizations not primarily dealing with education—the service organizations—are interested in securing leaders and, so, are interested in the progressive development of better programs. There are great possibilities for duplication and overlapping and consequent loss. She said that there is a growing feeling that all education should converge toward a common denominator for common progress.
HENRIETTA ADAMS LOUGHRAN, the chairman of the meeting, indicated the different fields in which advanced programs are developing. Nursing expects promotion to take place by steps: from staff nursing through supervision to administration of schools of nursing and nursing science. She gave the following instructions to the panel members:

1. The subject is limited to common denominators in advanced nursing education programs leading to the baccalaureate or master's degree.
   a. Examples of programs which are integral parts of baccalaureate degree curricula may be: (1) public health nursing curricula for graduate nurses preparing to enter that field; (2) teaching and supervision curricula to prepare head nurses and/or supervisors in hospital nursing; (3) advanced clinical programs to develop clinical nursing experts.
   b. Examples of programs on a master's degree level may be: (1) curricula leading to the degree of master of public health to prepare supervisors, consultants, or industrial specialists; (2) curricula in nursing administration to prepare executives for schools of nursing, nursing services, or public health nursing agencies; (3) curricula for miscellaneous personnel service to prepare directors of placement and guidance bureaus, state boards of nurse examiners, state and national nursing association offices.

2. May we accept the basic assumptions and principles adopted by the NLNE's special Committee on Postgraduate Clinical Nursing Courses as published in the American Journal of Nursing for June, 1944, which may be summarized and adapted to this discussion as follows:
   a. Advanced programs are based on first level general professional knowledge and skill in the particular field, or the candidate must take supplementary basic courses to fulfill the necessary prerequisites for advanced work.
   b. The advanced body of knowledge, appreciations, and skills not generally to be obtained in basic nursing education can be acquired more effectively through organized programs of instruction.
   c. All advanced nursing education programs should be an integral part of an advanced professional curriculum leading to the baccalaureate, or higher, degree in an accredited university or college. The usual educational control of faculty qualifications, curriculum content, student admission, and achievement should operate.
   d. Teaching techniques, study activities, and physical facilities which make up the "setting" for advanced nursing education courses should favor the development of the personal, social, and professional qualities essential to leadership.
   e. The time allotted to the advanced nursing education program must be reasonable in length and, in general, conform to that required for advanced study leading to specialization in similar professional fields.

ADVANCED NURSING EDUCATION PROGRAMS FOR PREPARATION OF CLINICAL SUPERVISORS AND CLINICAL TEACHERS AS TYPICAL OF BACCALAUREATE DEGREE CURricula

BY AGNES LOVE, R.N.

I presume to speak for a group of professional nurses who wish to prepare for positions as clinical instructors or clinical supervisors. An advanced program of study for this purpose is suggested. There are certain universities which already offer baccalaureate degrees into which this pattern could easily be articulated.

In this discussion clinical supervision is considered to be guiding others in the planning, directing, and managing of the care and treatment of patients with certain diagnoses, who are grouped conveniently into working units; clinical teaching is considered to be imparting of knowledge and guiding others in learning about the care and treatment of patients with certain diagnoses.

Some professional nurses wish preparation for clinical supervision, some for clinical instruction, and some for both, since in many situations one person occupies a dual role. Advanced preparation for these positions is required in three areas: (1) general education in the sciences and the humanities; (2) advanced preparation in the clinical specialty of choice; (3) preparation for either teaching or nursing service supervision, or both. Only a combination of university education with hospital or nursing school practice can provide these three areas. There are a number of professional nurses with sound basic professional preparation and sufficient experience in the field of interest who are ready for such programs on a bachelor's degree level. These programs should be supported as other university programs.

Graduate professional nurses usually receive, for the basic nursing curriculum, credit approximately equivalent to an academic year at a university, which is three quarters or two semesters. Upon registration these students might pursue courses in general education, with consideration given to the students' needs and special interests. These would include courses in the natural sciences, the humanities, the social sciences, and psychology, and basic public health courses are strongly suggested. All these courses are common denominators for preparation, whether the field of interest be community nursing service or surgical nursing. This work would afford an opportunity to secure the kind of education which is desirable for everyone, in order that each may take her place in a complex social, political, economic, and scientific order. A common knowledge is the basis for discussion and wise solution of our great problems.

The curriculum of a third year might be designed for advanced preparation in the clinical specialty, including advanced clinical courses and guided experience accompanied by science courses pertinent to the clinical content, such as physiology, chemistry, and physics. The clinical experience should be carefully planned to correlate with the clinical nursing courses and provide ample opportunity for individual guidance by qualified clinical instructors. The clinical part of the program should be operated on an educational basis. This special emphasis on the educational basis seems in order because of the widespread past and present practice of using both undergraduate and graduate nursing experience as a source of nursing service. An essentially educational experience might well be summarized in terms of university credits. It is in this clinical experience that we should strive to develop a high degree of technical skill, a greater understanding of the underlying scientific principles, a greater insight into the social aspects of illness, and a concept of the patient, his family, and his community relationships, as well as an understanding of human problems.

The senior year might provide preparation for either clinical teaching or clinical supervision. Preparation for clinical teaching or instruction requires courses in principles of learning and teaching, guided experience in teaching, and study of the curriculum. Preparation for clinical supervision of nursing services requires courses in principles of supervision and guided experience in supervision of nursing services in the chosen clinical specialty. Some suggested courses include time and motion studies, job analysis, personnel policies and practice, occupational and vocational psychology.

Some of these courses we need already exist in some universities, as for example, job analysis. We need expert nurse direction in order to guide us in the application to field practice of the principles learned in these courses, and expert nurse guidance is continuously needed on the job to implement the principles mentioned. We also need clinical nursing specialists to teach the advanced clinical nursing courses and to direct the advanced clinical practice.

Eligibility for admission should be based on ability to meet university entrance requirements and on sound basic professional education. If all requirements should have been met except experience in certain fields in the basic program, this would need to have been made up by supplementary work so that the student might bring to the advanced clinical program a broad basic professional preparation. In addition, successful experience in the field of interest tends to give depth of appreciation, which is of great value.

Through these programs we would hope to achieve competence which would enable us to design most effective nursing care for our patients, and to administer clinical units for optimum nursing benefit for patients and for optimum education of basic nursing students.
MASTER'S DEGREE PROGRAMS FOR THE PREPARATION OF NURSE ADMINISTRATORS

BY MARY S. TSCHUDIN, R.N.

There are many positions in nursing today which call for executive ability and a knowledge of sound principles and techniques of administration. In past years nurses who assumed administrative positions learned largely by the understudy process. If they were fortunately apprenticed under a competent administrator, they received experience in a series of minor executive positions and became familiar with the problems and techniques of their particular field. Understudies, however, tend to absorb bad as well as good techniques of their superior officers, with the result that this training on the job is often wasteful or even harmful.

Administrative ability has often been thought of as something which an individual either possessed or lacked, and until recent years there has been little awareness of the special learning experiences by which it might be acquired or developed. This was true in business, industry, and other fields, as well as in nursing. Industry, in many instances, has led the way in the recognition of basic techniques and underlying principles that make for efficient functioning of a group of workers. Administration is no longer a haphazard process, and apprenticeship type of training is no longer considered adequate. The present period is particularly crucial, for during the war graduate education was greatly curtailed or eliminated and many young, relatively inexperienced nurses must be prepared to assume executive positions.

Administration may be considered as the process by means of which the purpose of an institution or organization is attained. It promotes the effective functioning of all personnel, it determines the facilities needed, and it organizes all activities so that time, effort, and material will be directed toward a given end. It is the spark that makes the institution operate. Although particular administrative activities will vary in each agency or institution according to the primary purpose of the organization, there are certain fundamental processes which are common to all. These basic administrative activities have to do with:

1. Formulating, interpreting, and clarifying the purpose of the institution.
2. Determining the means by which the purpose will be achieved and the facilities necessary.
3. Determining needed personnel, their qualifications, and the means by which their efficient functioning can be maintained.
4. Determining the time required for performance of essential activities.
5. Organizing the whole for co-ordination of activities and achievement of purpose.

To determine the content of a program of studies for the preparation of nurse administrators, it is necessary to analyze these major functions in terms of specific abilities, which then become the objectives toward which the nurse is directed. Such a list of abilities may be derived from the functions set forth in the National League of Nursing Education’s pamphlet Faculty Positions in Schools of Nursing and How To Prepare for Them. Objectives for such a program might then be developed as follow:

1. An understanding of the techniques necessary to establish and maintain effective and harmonious working relationships, including personnel, co-operating agencies, professional and community groups.
2. An understanding of the principle types of activity essential to the particular field of administration.
3. A knowledge of the tools and facilities for effective functioning.
4. Ability to analyze functions of personnel, define and place responsibility, and co-ordinate and relate these functions.
5. An understanding of the qualifications necessary for personnel in the special fields.
6. An understanding of the techniques which make for effective personnel administration, and ability to use these techniques in promoting the welfare, growth, and development of personnel within the institution.
7. An understanding of the techniques of evaluation and experimentation, and skill in those applicable to the special field of administration.
9. An understanding of records essential to effective functioning.
10. Ability to express ideas clearly—both orally and in writing.
11. Skill in the use of conference techniques.
12. Ability to formulate and interpret policies.
13. An awareness of community needs in relation to the special field, and a sense of responsibility toward these needs.
14. Ability to give sound, constructive leadership.

Besides these abilities, the nurse preparing for administration should develop special competence in some particular area. Although administrative functions may be generalized or specialized, the trend toward specialization is increasing and administrative responsibility may be subdivided into such fields as personnel administration, placement, counseling, and curriculum.

The admission of students to a master’s degree program in nursing administration should be in accord with the admission policies of the graduate school of the particular university. The usual requirements for recognition as a candidate for a master’s degree include the bachelor’s degree from a recognized college or university, evidence of the applicant’s ability to do graduate work, and possession of the necessary foundation in the proposed academic major and minor fields. The student’s credentials and experience may be reviewed by a graduate school committee which will then assist in planning and guiding the student’s future program. A graduate record examination may be used in determining eligibility and in planning the program best suited to the candidate’s abilities. Adequate basic preparation in all the major fields of nursing should be required, as well as experience in staff nursing and in various minor executive positions such as head nurse, supervisor, or clinical instructor. In addition, the candidate should possess those personal qualifications which make for success in administration. The counseling program of the school should help the student to determine whether or not she is likely to succeed in her field of interest.

The requirements for the master’s degree vary in different universities. The type of degree conferred should harmonize with the major emphasis in the program. Whatever the plan, degrees in nursing should be equivalent to similar degrees conferred in other programs of the same university. The length of time required is at least one academic year devoted to full-time advanced study and the completion of a course of study in a major and one or two minor fields. Occasionally all of the work may be in the major field.
The minor should be in an allied or contributory field. An undergraduate major and minor are normally prerequisite for graduate work in the major and minor fields. Deficiencies must be made up before work on a graduate level is undertaken. A thesis which represents an actual contribution to knowledge or is concerned with the organization and interpretation of the materials of learning is usually required. A reading knowledge of a foreign language may or may not be necessary, depending upon the specific degree and the graduate school requirements of the particular institution.

A unified, planned program, adapted to the needs of each individual student and arranged for maximum learning value, is essential if the objectives outlined are to be attained. Scattered courses do not, as a rule, provide satisfactory sequences or the best utilization of abilities gained in each new course.
For this reason the graduate student should apply for acceptance as a candidate for an advanced degree as early as possible and with her advisory committee plan her total program.

While all educational programs should be adapted to the needs of individual students, this is particularly important in considering graduate study, since the professional background, experience, and interests differ widely in this group. Although the general program for the preparation of nurse administrators in all special fields will be basically the same, since the principal objectives are common to all fields, there must, nevertheless, be adjustment to the level of achievement of the student and her special fields of interest. The use of standardized tests may help to discover particular strengths and weaknesses.

Specific requirements will vary according to the plan of organizing the content in the various course offerings of different universities. Courses dealing with the principles and methods of teaching, supervision, and administration may provide the basic preparation for administration in all fields of nursing. These subjects appear under different titles and vary in arrangement of content, length, credit, etc. Various methods may be used to adapt the content of these core courses to the needs of a particular field. A period of related observation, experience, and opportunity to discuss and solve problems pertinent to the administrative field will assist in deepening the understanding of the principles being studied. The following program for preparation in administration in a school of nursing is presented to show a possible sequence and arrangement of courses with a major in nursing and a minor in education.
The total program is presumed to require forty-five quarter credits—twenty-four in nursing, twelve in education, and nine in the thesis.
According to the views expressed in this paper, a master's degree program for the preparation of nurse administrators should be built upon objectives derived from an analysis of the functions of administration. These should be sufficiently specific that needed course content will become evident. There are certain principles and methods of administration common to all administrative fields which may be secured through core courses. The program may be strengthened through carefully planned observation and experience. The plan must be adapted to the individual student through a careful analysis of her needs, interests, and capacity.

REPLY BY HENRIETTA DOLTZ, R.N., TO MRS. TSCHUDIN'S PAPER

I naturally agree that the admission of students to a master's degree program in nursing administration should be in accord with the admission policies of the graduate school of the particular university, but isn't it true that there are some recognized colleges or universities which are at the present time conducting degree programs in nursing without fulfilling the present-day concept of nursing in its entirety: i.e., health conservation in the widest sense; nursing or nurture of the mind and spirit, as well as the body; health education, as well as care of the sick; cognizance of the importance of the patient's social as well as physical environment; and health services to families and communities?
1. What fields of nursing are necessary before we can say that a student has had adequate preparation in the basic training?
2. Would the four fields of medical, surgical, obstetrical, and pediatric nursing be considered sufficient?
3. Should not we require more than these four fields, if these administrators that we are preparing are to establish a philosophy of teaching the health, preventive, and rehabilitative elements of nursing, as well as the curative in schools of nursing?
4. Could the NLNE's Basic Nursing Test Battery be used to supplement the information on the school of nursing transcript?

Although the paper just given has cited a program for preparation in administration of a school of nursing, I am wondering if some of the courses mentioned would not be considered "core" courses in the preparation of an administrator for a public health agency.

1. Principles and Methods of Teaching Nursing and Health Principles and Methods of Supervision Principles and Methods of Administration in Nursing Survey of Current Trends in Nursing Seminar in Nursing Problems
2. Seminar groups arranged for the nurses from each field of nursing under the leadership of a faculty member experienced in that field.

The program as outlined on the basis of three quarters, or an academic year, presupposes general education of college grade and a good basic preparation in nursing. This period, however, does not allow for electives or for supervised field work. I am wondering if this should not be required of all students. Would a program based on a calendar year conform to the basic assumption as being reasonable in length and conforming to the time required for advanced study leading to specialization in similar professional fields?

Obviously not all universities or colleges are qualified to sponsor a program on the master's level in nursing education. What should be the criteria for sponsoring such a program—(1) no exceptions; (2) qualifications of faculty; (3) intensiveness of study; (4) breadth of knowledge; (5) field experience.

Other discussants brought out the need for careful differentiation between the experience offered a graduate student of nursing and a student in basic courses. The former must be sufficiently adult to hold the interest of the student, since it is natural for a nurse to defer graduate work until she has found her logical field of specialization.

Ruth P. Kuehn offered as a criteria for graduate work: (1) identification of courses with students; (2) qualified faculty; (3) intensiveness of study, which should have depth; (4) width of knowledge. Dr. Kuehn felt that common denominators could be multiplied as nursing education increases its emphasis on total community service.
Summarizing agreement, the chairman, Mrs. Loughran, said that admission to advanced courses should depend upon broad basic preparation not only in the ten clinical fields, but also in general education, particularly the social and natural sciences. Advanced professional programs, including various specialties or levels of preparation, can have elements which are "core" courses. This is in accord with university practice, where one degree covers several special fields of study.

Criteria should be established for graduate and advanced education. These criteria should be applied not only to academic and core courses, but also to application of learning in field practice.

NEW PLANS IN NATIONAL ACCREDITATION

PART II: A PANEL DISCUSSION

Chairman: Bernice E. Anderson, R.N., chairman of the NNC's Committee of Interests to Plan for a Single Professional Accrediting Body in Nursing and secretary-treasurer of the New Jersey State Board of Nurse Examiners, Newark, N. J.

NNC COMMITTEE OF INTERESTS TO PLAN FOR A SINGLE ACCREDITING BODY IN NURSING

BY BERNICE E. ANDERSON, R.N.

Organization of committee.—Through the report of Sophie Nelson, chairman of the National Nursing Council, presented earlier today, you are already familiar with this new type of committee called a "committee of interests." This particular Committee of Interests to Plan for a Single Accrediting Body in Nursing, organized in January, 1946, represents all interests in the subject of accrediting in nursing that are actually engaged in accrediting and setting standards or using accrediting devices. The representation is:

National League of Nursing Education ........................................ Clara Quereau
                                                      Elizabeth C. Burgess
National Organization for Public Health Nursing .......... Mary C. Connor
                                                      Ruth W. Hubbard
Association of Collegiate Schools of Nursing ....... Agnes Gelinas
                                                      Dr. Ruth P. Kuehn
American Red Cross Nursing Service ......................... Jeannette Gibbons Council on Nursing Education, Catholic Hospital
  Association of U. S. and Canada .............................. Sister M. Geraldine Kulleck
National Association for Practical Nurse Education .... Mrs. Dorothy Nayer
Member-at-large ......................................................... Mrs. Estelle Massey Riddle
Division of Nursing, U. S. Public Health Service .... Marie Farrell
State boards of nurse examiners ................................. Bernice E. Anderson
                                                      (Chairman of committee)

Assignment to committee.—The assignment given to the committee was to prepare a plan for a single accrediting body in nursing to activate a program of nursing education and the establishment of a single accrediting body. (See "A Comprehensive Program for Nation-wide Action in the Field of Nursing," Section II, A, and E, prepared by the National Nursing Planning Committee.) The three parts of the assignment were the preparation of: (1) a plan of organization, (2) a budget, (3) suggestions for the amalgamation of present accrediting activities.

It was agreed that every effort should be made to plan in line with trends in accrediting in general education. The committee was fortunate in being able to secure the services of Dr. George A. Works, for many years secretary of the North Central Association and well versed in accrediting policies and procedures in general education.

Basic principles of accrediting by committee.—The first discussion of the committee centered around the basic principle to be adopted in relation to accrediting—whether the standards of the profession were to be imposed on the schools, or whether the schools themselves were to participate in setting up the standards. The committee was of the opinion that the interests of nursing in accrediting, in stimulating improvement of nursing education and nursing service, can best be served by the establishment of an organization of schools of nursing, the term "school" to mean both schools and programs of nursing education. For convenience in discussion, this organization has been called a national association of schools of nursing.

A second principle, as expressed in the introductory statement of the committee's report, is this: "It will be noted that in developing the administrative organization, provision has been made to safeguard against a few members getting into strategic positions and holding them for undue lengths of time, thus creating a situation by which the views of a limited group come to dominate the association. In an organization of the character of the proposed association, provision should be made for the gradual infusion of 'new blood.' Safeguards against long periods of service by a few individuals have been erected, and at the same time provision has been made for the gradual introduction of new personnel, thus making for progress but reducing to a minimum the danger of abrupt changes in policy. A profession such as nursing has in its membership many persons of ideas. These individuals should be utilized to the maximum, not only because of the value of their ideas, but that there may be a steady flow of personnel from responsible positions in the association back to the ranks of the profession. There is some danger that an association of schools will grow apart from the needs of the profession. With this in mind, provision has been made for membership in the administration of the association of persons who are not directly responsible for the conduct of schools but who are in a position to make a contribution to nursing education."

A third principle is that the proposed plan places the primary responsibility for the conduct of the work of accrediting in the two suggested commissions, rather than in the executive committee or in the association as a whole. The leadership will, therefore, emanate from the bottom up rather than from the top down.

Suggested membership of the administrative organization.—It is suggested that the organization shall be formed of accredited schools of nursing offering programs for professional and nonprofessional education in nursing, membership to be purely voluntary but confined to schools accredited on the basis of criteria adopted by the organization.

Purposes of the administrative organizations shall be:

1. To stimulate through its accrediting practices the general improvement of nursing education and nursing practice in the United States, both on the professional and nonprofessional levels.

2. To make counseling services available on request with regard to educational programs in nursing.

3. To prepare and publish lists of accredited schools and materials designed to assist individuals and secondary schools and colleges by furnishing them data that will serve educational and vocational guidance purposes.

4. To stimulate special study, experimentation, and research in nursing education and service.

5. To provide lay and professional groups with information for the purpose of developing and promoting an understanding of the ideals, objectives, and needs of nursing education.

6. To collaborate with the other nursing organizations concerned with the promotion of nursing education and service.
7. To establish co-operative relationships with educational, medical, hospital, public health, and other related organizations for the purpose of improving nursing education and service.

Classes of members of the administrative organization:

1. Basic professional schools, including supplemental* courses for graduate nurses, which are collegiate controlled, hospital controlled, or independent.

2. Advanced professional schools and programs, including clinical, under the control of a college or university.

3. Nonprofessional schools which are located in hospitals, vocational schools, other agencies, or are independent.

Structure of the administrative organization:

1. The association shall be composed of one nurse representative from each accredited school.

2. The association shall have an executive committee composed of eleven voting members, nine of whom shall be nurses:

| Chairman |
| Vice chairman |
| Secretary (without vote) |

Professional commission

| Chairman |
| Vice chairman |
| Secretary (without vote) |

Nonprofessional commission

4 elected by professional commission
2 elected by nonprofessional commission
1 elected by State Board Conference

The members of the executive committee shall serve for five years and may not succeed themselves. The chairman and vice chairman shall be elected annually and may not succeed themselves. Their duties shall be:

a. To make recommendations relating to the work of the association as a whole.

b. To plan the finances.

c. To hear appeals of schools not satisfied with the decisions of the commissions.

d. To plan the program for the annual meeting.

*The term "supplemental" refers to a course or a series of courses offered to the professional nurse whose basic preparation has not been as complete as desired, or who wishes to bring herself up to date without necessarily specializing in a particular clinical nursing field or other area of instruction.
3. The Commission on Professional Education shall consist of forty-six voting members, forty-five elected, and one ex officio:

30 professional nurses elected by nurse representatives of professional schools including:
9 representing basic hospital schools
9 representing basic collegiate schools
12 representing advanced nursing programs
9 members-at-large elected as above
3 elected by nonprofessional school representatives
3 elected by State Board Conference
Ex officio: Chairman | Nonprofessional commission
Secretary without vote | Nonprofessional commission

4. The Commission on Nonprofessional Education shall consist of twenty-five members, twenty-four elected and one ex officio:

15 professional nurses elected by nurse representatives of nonprofessional schools
6 members-at-large elected by nurse representatives of professional schools
3 elected by State Board Conference
Ex officio: Chairman | Professional commission
Secretary without vote | Professional commission

5. The members of the commissions shall serve for three years, not more than two consecutive terms. The chairman and vice chairman shall be elected annually and may not succeed themselves.

6. The duties of the commissions shall be:

a. To arrange for surveys.
b. To arrange for re-surveys, when necessary.
c. To prepare a roster of accredited schools.
d. To review from time to time the criteria used in accrediting schools and programs.
e. To conduct annual conferences for discussion of problems in education of nurses, including one joint conference.
f. To assist schools desiring to improve their work.

Pertinent questions relating to the proposed plan will now be discussed by the members of the committee, who comprise the panel.
NEW PLANS IN NATIONAL ACCREDITATION

WHAT WAS DONE IN ACREDITING IN NURSING PRIOR TO THE APPOINTMENT OF THIS COMMITTEE?

BY BERNICE E. ANDERSON, R.N.

The NOPHN in 1920 began the accrediting of advanced programs in public health nursing through its Committee on Accrediting. This program included surveys, the publication of a list of approved courses, and consultation service. In 1932 representatives of twenty colleges and universities with nursing departments organized the Association of Collegiate Schools of Nursing. The NLNE, in 1936, voted to begin an accrediting program of basic schools of nursing and clinical postgraduate courses, and in 1938 the Catholic Hospital Association inaugurated its accrediting program. The Red Cross Nursing Service and the U. S. Public Health Service have found it necessary to use certain accrediting procedures without an accrediting program, because the nursing profession has no widespread accrediting program in operation, with the exception of public health nursing programs. In the practical nurse field the National Association for Practical Nurse Education has been organized, and has published an approved list.

WHAT WERE THE REASONS FOR SUGGESTING THIS PARTICULAR PLAN?

BY RUTH P. KUEHN, R.N.

This particular plan seems to be a logical next step. Institutions of higher learning, particularly state universities, are becoming increasingly concerned about outside agencies that are exerting pressure. They believe that the institutions themselves should have a part. A cross-fertilization of ideas between schools of nursing and universities should be brought about. Should not the schools that will pay the fees have an opportunity to assist in formulating policies?

HAVE ANY EFFORTS BEEN MADE BEFORE THIS TIME TO BRING ABOUT CO-ORDINATION IN ACREDITING?

BY SISTER M. GERALDINE KULLECK, R.N.

At the time when the Association of Collegiate Schools of Nursing was organized, much thought was given to the effect which the separation of the two classes of schools, collegiate and noncollegiate, would have upon the solidarity and unity of the profession of nursing. Concern was expressed about the effect which the organization of the new association might have upon eventual accrediting of the schools of nursing.
The Catholic Hospital Association, in 1931, first suggested evaluation of the Catholic schools by the Council on Nursing Education. As the project took form, the officers and various committee members of the National League of Nursing Education were approached in 1937 with the request that some co-ordinated activity be undertaken. At that time, however, the officers of the National League thought it better to pursue their own course without reference to the activities of the Council on Nursing Education, Catholic Hospital Association.

Various contacts of the Division of Nursing Education of the United States Public Health Service with the National League of Nursing Education and with the National Organization for Public Health Nursing might also be interpreted as efforts to secure co-ordination in accrediting. Moreover, it has been pointed out on more than one occasion that the contacts between the National Organization for Public Health Nursing and the National League of Nursing Education, when the interests of these two organizations centered in the same school, might well be interpreted as at least informal efforts to bring about some co-ordination in the evaluation and accreditation of the school.

In general, it would seem that, historically speaking, the various associations in the nursing field, interested in school approvals, have been guided in their efforts in the past rather by a pronounced consciousness of the special purposes of their own organization than by a pronounced consciousness of the purposes, needs, and accomplishments of the field of nursing as a whole. This is said not by way of criticism, but by way of emphasis. The future will reveal whether the various associations interested in accreditation have served better the whole cause of nursing and nursing education by emphasizing their own particular objectives than they would have served those interests by too facile an obliteration of their respective differences in their objectives.

How Does This Plan Relate to the Structure Study Plan?

By Estelle M. Riddle, R.N.

The name of the proposed accrediting body emphasizes the philosophy with which the schools would do their own accrediting. Responsibility is concentrated. The plan for structural reorganization of the nursing organizations, presented by the Raymond Rich Associates, on the other hand, leaves accreditation in the hands of the nursing organizations. A commission on education would make recommendations for or against accreditation (based on findings of the Bureau of Examinations) to the House of Delegates. If the latter approves, certification is to be issued by the National Academy of Nurses. Thus, responsibility would be divided among several areas.
IS THIS PLAN IN LINE WITH ACCREDITING PHILOSOPHY AND PRACTICES IN GENERAL EDUCATION?

BY GEORGE A. WORKS, PH.D.

In the experience of general education, accrediting agencies are regional. In all but one of them the accrediting is done by the schools themselves. Since no one knows at the present time just what the developments will be in the field of nonprofessional (practical) nursing, its accreditation procedures might well be kept with those for the profession.

An organization of schools is likely to be more socially sensitive than would be the profession, though of course the accrediting body must be sensitive to the needs of the profession as well as to the needs of the public. Danger does exist that the schools may grow somewhat apart from the profession. For that reason the commission would have representation from other than schools.

IS THE ORGANIZATION WEAKENED BY THE LEADERSHIP OF THE COMMISSION?

BY RUTH W. HUBBARD, R.N.

It is thought there should be a small committee concerned with over-all problems such as finances. There would always be the right of appeal to the executive committee. Evaluation and accreditation are so important that they inevitably take the full time of a group.

WHY SHOULD THERE BE REPRESENTATIVES OF THE NONPROFESSIONAL COMMISSION ON THE PROFESSIONAL COMMISSION AND VICE VERSA?

BY DOROTHY DAUBERT NAYER, R.N.

This plan provides for representation of members of the commission on nonprofessional nursing on the commission on professional nursing, and vice versa, for a sound reason. We are hoping in nursing to think of the total nursing care of the patient, and, in the accrediting program, to accredit schools and programs preparing people to nurse, regardless of the type or level of the program. If we isolate those concerned with nonprofessional nursing from those concerned with professional nursing, we will find each group thinking only in terms of its special interest. Such thinking will tend to keep the various groups separated rather than bring them together. Informing each group about the aims, plans, and functions of the other will serve to broaden the knowledge and interests of the persons on both commissions, and so serve to make an accrediting program in nursing the over-all program which is desired and planned for.
HOW WILL THE ORGANIZATIONS BE BROUGHT TOGETHER?
BY SISTER M. GERALDINE KULLECK, R.N.

As far as the discussions in the committee have gone, the National League of Nursing Education, the Association of Collegiate Schools of Nursing, the National Organization for Public Health Nursing, the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses, and the Council of Nursing Education of the Catholic Hospital Association will be brought together (1) through visits of members of the committee to the governing boards of the various organizations, the intention being to give these organizations an opportunity of free discussion with a representative of our committee; (2) through the publication of a single list of accredited schools; and (3) no doubt, public relations processes will be developed by which more complete understanding by the various organizations of each other's purposes will be facilitated.

A number of practical procedures might here be suggested, all tending towards a better understanding of the field of nursing as a whole. Through such an understanding, the specific purposes of the various organizations could be brought about. To illustrate what I mean from my personal experience: I find, for example, relatively little understanding of what is meant by the integration of religious viewpoints in the curriculum of the school of nursing, as the Council on Nursing Education of the Catholic Hospital Association is constantly insisting. Many persons are willing to grant that the Council on Nursing Education of the Catholic Hospital Association has an interest in the religious motivation of nursing and are willing to accept religious instruction as part of the nursing curriculum. Few only see the meaning of the interpenetration of the curriculum by religious views, principles, practices, motives, and objectives as effective means for the development of a perfectly valid and dynamic philosophy of nursing education. Much would be gained in furtherance of a single accrediting body in nursing, if this view could be sympathetically accepted by other organizations in the nursing field as a legitimate and necessary contribution to nursing. We shall have to strive for a better understanding of each other's individual and characteristic traits, rather than for an eradication of each other's characteristics.

WHAT WILL ALL THIS COST AND WHO WILL PAY FOR IT?
BY ELIZABETH C. BURGESS, R.N.

It is hard to determine at this point how much the proposed program would cost, but a small group is working on the problem. Accreditation is more than putting certain schools on a list. It is a service to schools, and the amount of service wanted will determine the cost. It is suggested that some support be supplied by the nursing organizations. The NLNE has spent considerable in the past. There will be actual membership fees paid by the schools, charges for review, counsel, and service to the schools. The program is expected to pay for itself eventually.
SPECIAL INTEREST CONFERENCE

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1946—4:15-5:15 P.M.

Presiding: KATHARINE FAVILLE, R.N., dean of the Wayne University School of Nursing, Detroit, Mich.

ENROLLMENT FOR CAREERS IN NURSING

KATHARINE FAVILLE explained that this conference was under the auspices of the Committee on Careers in Nursing of the National Nursing Council, which had been appointed to take the place of the wartime Committee on Recruitment of Student Nurses. She pointed out the great growth in nursing services in relation to the marked reduction in student admissions. There is great variety over the country in results of efforts to meet this year’s quota of 40,000 admissions. Some schools have more applications than they want; others—including some of the best—are far from filled. While a long-term program is greatly needed and the problem should be viewed as part of the total social picture, the conference would concentrate, said Miss Faville, on what to do about the immediate situation.

"WANTED—MORE NURSES"

BY JEAN HENDERSON, R.N.

Across the nation during World War II recruiting posters read: "Wanted—More Nurses." In newspapers and magazines, on the radio, and from the speakers’ platforms, tribute was paid to the nurse; both those serving with the armed forces and those on the home front were praised for their performances, their important contributions to a nation at war. Nursing services were at a premium. The profession was brought into dramatic prominence.

The war has ended, the spotlight has shifted in many fields, but "Wanted—More Nurses" continues to be a significant sign of the times. It was predicted that with the return of Army and Navy nurses to civilian service, conditions would improve, but we know they have become increasingly worse. The shortage of nurses throughout the nation today calls for prompt action.

The need for nurses is still urgent, but recruitment is still difficult. The unfortunate difference in the postwar period is that we now have less assistance to do the job. There is no longer any nationwide recruitment program in operation that is aided by Federal agencies. There is no longer the inducement of a free professional education. The psychological effect of war as a stimulant to all-out public co-operation no longer exists. Now, more than ever before, it is important that we make every individual recruitment effort count.

A recruitment program, whether it is national, state, or local, requires careful and intelligent study, planning, and execution. To produce results, a recruitment program should include certain basic ingredients. Each is important—but the one I want to stress today is "Know Your Audience." "Know Your Audience" may be a cliché, but it is a frequently disregarded piece of sound advice that may make or break recruitment efforts.

In writing or speaking we are forever being reminded to think of our audience, and we are inclined to nod impatiently and answer: "Certainly we are thinking of our audience." But are we really making an honest, intelligent effort to put ourselves in the other fellow’s shoes, to think as she thinks? Or are we unconsciously attributing to her our own likes, dislikes, and attitudes? Some of you, for instance, may still not be convinced of the need for painstaking, hard-hitting recruitment. You may have the impression that young women will be attracted automatically to their two traditional professions, nursing and teaching, as was once the case. With the present nursing shortage as acute as it is, this is a dangerous assumption.

Today positions are open to women in almost every field. Schools and employers are competing for the nation’s young people. If the nursing profession is to get its share of good recruits, it must go after them, convince them that nursing is their most favorable choice in comparison with other fields.

The realization that young women ready to choose a career must be sought after and convinced is only one step in knowing your audience. You must next decide how best to convince them. In order to do this on other than a hit-or-miss basis, it is necessary to determine their attitudes. How do they feel about the nursing profession? How much do they know about it? How well informed are they concerning schools of nursing? What are their primary considerations in choosing a career? To know your audience, frequent opinion or attitude studies are necessary. Without them you neither know where you are going, nor, after you get there, where you have been. It is important to conduct these studies scientifically, avoiding the easy error of halfway or misdirected measures.
For the purpose of the discussion today, the Office of Health Information of the U. S. Public Health Service made a sporcheck of approximately one hundred and fifty high school girls. Made only in one area, this check obviously does not give the national picture; neither is it a comprehensive study from the standpoint of the questions asked. It is intended to serve only as an example of how information concerning an audience can be applied in the use of recruitment media.

The groups tested included both rural and urban high school senior girls. About half of the audience indicated that in thinking of a career they had considered nursing. Seventy-eight per cent of the group tested indicated that they did not know as much about life in a nursing school as they knew about life in a girl's college, and 68 per cent said they would not know where to send for information concerning schools of nursing if they wanted it. As for catalogs and other descriptive material from these schools, 60 per cent had never seen any, and of those who had seen such material, 60 per cent said it did not make them want to become a nurse.

This data indicates not only a lack of information, but also a desire for information. This potential audience offers both a challenge and an excellent opportunity to recruiters of student nurses. Of the number of girls who said they had considered nursing as a career, 76 per cent expressed an interest in knowing more about the profession in general, and of those who had not considered nursing as a possible future, as many as 22 per cent were still interested in knowing more about it. So the fact that girls have never considered nursing as a career may put them in the more-difficult-to-reach class. It does not necessarily remove them from the list of possible recruits.

Both those who had considered a nursing career and those who had not were very much in the dark about job opportunities open to graduate nurses. Sixty per cent of those who were more interested said they did not know the various job opportunities; an even higher percentage was found among those less interested. Sixty-two per cent of the audience thought nurses' prestige rated as high as that of teachers', secretaries', and home economists'; and 72 per cent thought graduate nurses' salaries were as high. Sixty-five per cent realized there is a shortage of nurses now that the war is over.

These figures point to attitudes on which to build in swelling the ranks of new recruits. Of course, these questions were asked in only one area. In this area there had been much publicity on the nurse shortage. That fact was undoubtedly reflected in the high percentage of girls who were aware of the shortage. The amount of publicity may also have been responsible to a large extent for the audience's attitude concerning nurses' prestige and salary. It would not be safe to assume that these attitudes prevail in other groups of young women.

Those of us interested in recruitment can, however, learn from this spot-check facts about our audience that we need to know. Let's consider two media of recruitment in connection with the audience we have just tested:
first, the informational material representing nursing schools—catalogs, viewbooks, pamphlets, letters to prospective recruits. The fact that so many of the group know so little about nursing schools highlights the need for more widespread distribution of descriptive material concerning schools of nursing. Vocational guidance counselors in high schools should be well supplied with material on nursing schools and the profession in general. A representative from nursing schools in the vicinity of high schools could talk with the senior girls and provide them with descriptive material. Furthermore, a letter could be sent to each high school senior girl in the community asking if she has considered nursing as a career, summarizing the needs for nurses and the advantages of belonging to the profession, and telling something about the particular school represented by the letter. When prospects do not come to the nursing schools for information, the nursing schools must go to the prospects. Urgent need demands aggressive effort.

As to the shape this informational material should take: of the members of the audience who had seen catalogs and descriptive material from schools of nursing, 60 per cent said it did not make them want to become a nurse. The material should be geared to appeal to young people; it should compare favorably with similar material issued by girls’ colleges. To answer the need for more information concerning nursing in general, this material should sell the profession as well as a particular school. It should point out need, advantages, opportunities after graduation. In short, informational material should be a good ambassador of the profession and the school.

The second recruitment medium I should like to mention is the recruitment committee. This committee should be strengthened and expanded to include younger nurses, physicians, hospital administrators, hospital boards, physicians’ wives, and civic and industrial leaders. As far as the particular audience under consideration is concerned, such a representative committee could do an effective job in reaching and interesting potential recruits in the nursing profession, particularly since so many individuals have indicated a desire to know more about it. The prestige of a committee whose membership includes both professional people and community leaders would lend weight to its recruitment efforts.

And so it goes. Once you know your audience you have a 100 per cent better chance of influencing it. This applies in an individual community and it applies in the nation as a whole. The nursing profession needs to know the national audience picture. It needs to find out as soon as possible what over-all changes, if any, the end of the war has made in the reasons girls become nurses. Otherwise, much valuable time and recruitment ammunition may be wasted.
WHAT IS WRONG WITH OUR PRESENT METHOD OF RECRUITING?

BY HUGO V. HULLERMAN, M.D.

The topic for today's discussion might be summarized in two questions: (1) What is wrong with our present method of recruiting; and (2) What can be done about it? To state the problem bluntly, there is and has been a dreadful shortage of graduate nurses, and this year there is, furthermore, an alarming shortage of new enrollments in the freshman classes. Nursing organizations have felt that responsibility for correcting this situation is largely theirs. Hospitals need nurses to serve the patients and the public. Hospitals have also had the responsibility throughout the years of training students, fully recognizing that in doing this they are providing graduate nurses who later will be used not only by hospitals but by industry, by public health, by government, and by physicians in their private offices, as well as by patients requiring private duty nurses. Because of the important service which hospitals render the public—a service that requires nursing care, hospitals have felt responsibility, too, for recruiting an adequate supply of student nurses. Thus, hospitals, motivated partly by necessity and partly by altruism, and nursing organizations, motivated largely by altruism and a sense of professional responsibility, have in the past been the two agencies which have assumed a major responsibility for the recruitment of nurses. There has been relatively little, and in some cases no, assistance in this activity from some of the large governmental users of nurses, from the public, from industry, etc. This lack of applied and organized effort by all concerned was recognized even before the war and was largely overcome during the war as a result of the organized program for recruitment of Cadet Corps nurses. With the termination of the war there was a serious setback of organized effort on the part of all these agencies. As a result, recruitment of nurses for the fall classes devolved largely upon nursing organizations and hospitals. This is, I think, one of the things that is wrong with the present method of recruiting.

Hospitals, nursing organizations, and the Public Health Service recognized over a year ago that there would be serious difficulty in recruiting nurses for the student classes in 1946 and, probably, in 1947. A committee of interests was formed by the National Nursing Council for War Service which is now known as the Committee on Careers in Nursing. It was apparent to the committee that there would be a serious problem in recruiting student nurses for 1946. This committee is made up largely of nurses. Nurses are imbued with the idea rather generally that only the best qualified nurses should be graduated and that only a relatively few of the nursing schools are capable of turning out good graduates. This is idealistic thinking. It took several meetings of the Committee on Interests before the decision was firmly established that it was necessary to use existing facilities for training nurses, the poor as well as the good, at least until such time as the better schools could turn out the needed number of graduates. Even then the decision to organize a national recruitment plan for all approved schools was limited to recruitment for 1946. Whether or not recruitment for existing schools would continue for 1947 classes was left to later appraisal. The result of this attitude was that the recruitment plan for 1946 got started late and it was impossible to include more than a limited number of organizations and methods of recruiting because of the limited time available. The trouble here basically was that the objective of recruitment of an adequate number of nurses for training of the quality which had been customary in the past was confused with the objective of improving the standards of nurse education.

Explanation of this attitude points to two other places where changes are in order: first, recruitment programs must be thought out and initiated on a long-term basis, not a short-term basis. Incidentally, I should like to say that the Committee on Careers in Nursing is, I believe, unanimously of the opinion that long-term planning is a prime requisite for future programs. The second point is that, although there is a relationship between quality and quantity of training, we are forced to focus our attention upon each of these objectives separately, at least to the extent that emphasis upon improvement of quality shall not prevent an adequate flow of graduate nurses. Certainly, let us carry on with intensive effort to improve the quality of teaching, but let us also continue to graduate an adequate supply of nurses of the quality that the public has learned to accept.

It is hard to sell an unattractive product. For a long time comments in some of the professional nursing journals and statements for the public press, occasionally by nursing leaders and, also, by less well-known nurses, have suggested that a girl who enters nurses' training has accepted a one-way ticket to a lifelong breadline. This I do not believe and never have believed. On the contrary, a girl who enters a school of nursing today is handing herself a key to innumerable chances for a satisfying and remunerative future. Admittedly, nurses have been underpaid in many instances, and working conditions often are not all that nurses want. Certainly it is conceivable that there will be periods of over-supply of graduate nurses in relation to demand. Because of the large defection from the nursing ranks, however, for such good reasons as marriage, etc., and because of the increasing demand for care in hospitals and for nurses in other health fields, no one can predict that a real over-supply of nurses is probable in the foreseeable future.

I do not wish to minimize the importance of low salaries, undesirable working conditions, or job insecurity. These are situations faced by women and men in most occupations, and they are important, and there is little, if any, statistical evidence on which to say nurses are peculiar in this respect. On the other hand, graduate nurses have open to them thousands of jobs in public health, many of them requiring specialized training and offering additional prestige; thousands of opportunities are offered by industries; thousands of nurses are their own entrepreneurs in the sense that they are private duty nurses; in hospitals and schools of nurse education there are numerous channels for individual advancement. In the 1945 Directory, in 62 hospitals in Maine, 33 of the administrators said that they were registered nurses; in South Carolina, in 66 hospitals 14 administrators stated that they were registered nurses; in Illinois, in 319 hospitals 130 of the administrators stated that they were registered nurses; in Colorado, 28 in 95 hospitals; in California, in 355 hospitals 103 administrators said that they were registered nurses. There are thousands of positions in government which pay excellent salaries. Nurses are not the poorest paid group of women workers by any means and we note, too, that there has been a tremendous increase in salaries and a marked improvement in working conditions for nurses throughout the country.

These points are discussed here to illustrate another aspect that I think may be wrong with our recruitment program. It is not enough for nursing leaders to recognize and believe in the advantages of nursing as a career. If nursing organizations are to assume the responsibility for recruitment, no method that they select will be very effective if the vast majority of nurses individually believe that they are in a second-rate profession. Nursing is one of the most desirable, appreciated, and productive of careers. It is generally so recognized by the public and especially by hospital administrators. Two things have seriously hampered recruitment—public expressions of low nursing morale and lack of stress upon the advantages of nursing as a career.

These items, then, are those which are basically wrong with the present method of recruiting and there are others, of course, of almost equal importance: (1) lack of total organization; (2) confused thinking about the need for numbers of nurses with the need for improvement of education; (3) short-term instead of long-term planning; (4) disproportionate emphasis on unsatisfactory phases of employment; (5) lack of conviction on the part of nurses generally that nursing is one of the best, if not the best, of the professions open to women.

When these handicaps are thrown against a national background of an inadequate supply of personnel for every kind of job, the importance of an adequate recruitment program is obvious. I wish to re-emphasize that the recruitment of a normal number of student nurses—important as it is to hospitals—is equally important to all other consumers of nursing service. It is from this group, graduated from hospital schools of nursing, that industry, physicians, public health, veterans' and other governmental agencies, schools of nursing, etc., must draw for some years to come for recruits to their own ranks. This fact, I think, emphasizes the absolute necessity of a combined and well thought-out, long-term plan for nurse recruitment. Now for the question, what can be done about it?

1. The national recruitment program should be placed under the direction of a qualified, full-time secretary. The secretary should establish and direct a recruitment program, planned on a long-term basis in accordance with policies approved by nursing organizations, hospitals, etc.
2. All major employers of nurses should be represented on a permanent committee advisory to the full-time secretary.

3. The primary objective should be the recruitment of an adequate supply of student nurses.

4. In the final analysis recruitment is done in the states and the local areas. The primary methods to be used by the full-time secretary and staff should be those which will mobilize assistance for state and local recruitment groups. Adequate organization and long-term planning at the state and city levels are direct concerns of the national secretary.

5. It should be established as a principle that the recruitment committee and secretary have no direct concern with, and should not dissipate their energy in efforts in, upgrading personnel practices for nurses. Separate machinery may be established for this purpose.

6. It should be accepted as a principle that the recruitment staffs do not have a primary responsibility for the improvement of nursing morale. Nevertheless, nursing morale must be improved if nursing is to grow as a profession, and this should become a definite objective of nursing organizations.

These are things which can be done to correct the present difficulties with nurse recruitment. An extreme alternative would be to do nothing about the situation, on the assumption that a period of job scarcity is to be expected in the near future. There are, indeed, some very pertinent arguments in favor of such a course. If you assume that the present system of rendering nursing care is technically unsound in some of its major phases, a prolonged period of acute nursing shortage on the basis of necessity certainly would hasten a readjustment in the pattern of care available to patients. It is not, however, typical of the American way of doing things to precipitate a crisis. We usually prefer to change our pattern by gradual stages, thus benefiting from experience gained over rather long periods of trial and error.

STUDENT RECRUITMENT A VOCATIONAL CHOICE

BY HARRY A. JAGER

Since I am approaching the question of student recruitment from the point of view of vocational choice, my ideas might not fit into the short-term program upon which the conference is concentrating.

There are about 600,000 girls who are graduated from high school each year. The nursing profession is interested in enrolling those who have desirable characteristics for nursing to a marked extent—that is to say, perhaps only the top half. This makes a pool of 300,000 girls, one in ten of whom should choose nursing to fill a quota of 30,000 annually.

Characteristics of good nurses, however, are not necessarily those of good academic students, although good learning ability is essential. This means that any stereotyped method of selection, such as taking only those in the college preparatory course, is bound to include many girls unfit for nursing in other respects than learning ability and to exclude many able and fit girls who don’t happen to be taking a foreign language or mathematics to the degree expected of college aspirants, but who actually have excellent learning ability.

The profession needs to determine minimum rather than maximum requirements. Three things can happen in setting up qualifications: they can be (1) too low, and the profession will get bad nurses; (2) too high, and enough will not be recruited; (3) wrong, with the result that candidates will not fit into the profession.

The fact that about 30 per cent of all students entering schools of nursing do not finish the course indicates an urgent need to determine with some degree of assurance the characteristics of successful nurses. Scholastic ability should neither be minimized nor exaggerated. We need to determine, also, the actual preliminary preparation which will function in the nursing education institution. High schools should be encouraged to broaden their base of suitable candidates and to conduct experiments as to courses more suitable for prospective nurses than the college preparatory or any other stereotyped course now offers. It should be kept in mind that certain human qualities necessary in good nurses may actually lead some girls to avoid classical studies.

Finally, the best kind of selection on the part of the educational institution is based upon the intelligent choice of the individual. This kind of choice is not a spot decision but is dependent upon extended guidance services available to the high school pupil throughout the entire time of her secondary school experience. Such a choice not only will consider the individual’s abilities, interests, and experience, but will also consider alternate careers to nursing. Some one in the school should be trained to match the girl and the profession.

It seems entirely probable that one girl in ten of the top half of all graduating classes exposed to this kind of experience in high schools would be led to nursing as a career on the basis of a great deal more competency than is now possible. The natural result would be not only a rapid decline in the drop-out rate in the preclinical period, but a sure, if gradual, increase in the quality of the enrollment of nursing education institutions.

RECRUITING AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

BY RUTH HARRINGTON

The University of Minnesota School of Nursing has tried in a limited way to do selective recruiting. A barrage of materials has not been sent out, but instead, tests given to all high school seniors have picked out those who indicated nursing as a choice among careers, and scholastic achievements have provided a further selection. Such a dual mode of selection is rough in that it leaves out the personality element. We do not know enough, and more research is needed as to what constitutes adequate tests. A study is now being made at the University of Minnesota.

I have talked with directors of schools of nursing about the problem. One suggested a symposium on nursing in colleges. School bulletins should be revised to include what the prospective student wants to know. Films should be used in helping high school girls to understand what goes on in nursing. Better use of school alumnae associations should be made, not to high-pressure young people to enter nursing, but to pick up genuinely interested and well-adapted persons.

I urge that schools of nursing develop programs better fitted to the physical, mental, and emotional needs of the age group with which the schools deal.

During the discussion period Mrs. Spalding spoke at some length, saying that recruitment workers are faced with several problems. Patients must be cared for now, and enough students must be admitted to meet the nation's future need for nurses. There is a difference between counseling and recruitment, and it is a question whether one group should do both. During the emergency there was too much stress on immediate needs, but Mrs. Spalding believed that in the last few months more effort had been made to get graduate nurses to do the nursing in hospitals. She expressed the opinion that it would go far toward solving the recruitment problem if not only leaders, but everybody involved, would show genuine enthusiasm for nursing.

A question from the floor as to whether or not drop-outs of 30 per cent are bad as compared with other fields caused Mr. Jager to reply that the records of all professions are disturbing. Many studies show, he said, that there are as many people out of college who should be there as there are people in college who should never have entered. There is, he insisted, no such thing as "the upper third." Individual differences and skills are such that people upper in some ways are lower in others.

Another question from the floor was that, since meeting nursing needs has become a vital community problem, why should not high schools put in an orientation course to show prospective students what the profession involves. Mr. Jager replied, "My whole professional life is devoted to trying to see that such courses are instituted." He said that he valued the personal interview and the psychometric tests, if they did not weigh too heavily. He would like to see the question of nursing presented to a girl about when she is in the tenth grade.
SPECIAL INTEREST CONFERENCE
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1946—1:15-5:15 P.M.

Presiding: Mildred I. Lorentz, R.N., director of the Michael Reese Hospital School of Nursing, Chicago, Ill.

PERSONNEL POLICIES AND PRACTICES FOR SCHOOLS OF NURSING

Participants: Sister M. Aniceta Breen, R.N., instructor of nursing arts in the St. Francis Hospital School of Nursing, Pittsburgh, Penn.; Agnes Ohlson, R.N., secretary of the Board of Examiners for Nursing, State of Connecticut, Hartford, Conn.; Genevieve K. Bixler, Ph.D., educational consultant, Washington, D.C.; Julia Miller, R.N., dean of the Emory University School of Nursing, Emory University, Ga.; Mary S. Tschudin, R.N., educational director of the Harborview Division of the University of Washington, Seattle, Wash.

HOW CAN PERSONNEL POLICIES AND PRACTICES FOR SCHOOLS OF NURSING BE IMPROVED?

BY MILDRED I. LORENTZ, R.N.

The terms "personnel administration" and "personnel practices" have been used in relation to industrial management for a quarter of a century, but only fairly recently have they been used in relation to nursing personnel. The terms and their meanings in nursing are assuming greater importance each day and hold places of great prominence in our postwar planning. According to the basic concepts outlined in a study by a joint committee of the Pennsylvania State Nurses' Association and the Pennsylvania Hospital Association entitled Characteristics of a Sound Program of Nursing Personnel Administration,¹ "The ultimate purpose of nursing personnel administration is to secure and hold efficient nurses and administrators so that the nursing service may be effectively conducted and constantly improved. In her monograph Nursing and Nursing Education,² Agnes Gelinas said, "Obviously there cannot be one set of personnel standards for all branches of the nursing profession throughout the country."

Much has been written, and many discussions have been held, about personnel policies and practices for staff nurses, and somewhat less has been said about personnel policies and practices for nursing school personnel. Our discussion will be concerned this afternoon with the improvement of personnel administration for faculties of schools of nursing.

²Agnes Gelinas, Nursing and Nursing Education.
The present period is a period of change and a period of planning for the future of nursing education, so such a discussion as this seems very appropriate for the times. We all recognize the fact that the quality of our school personnel will affect to a major degree the quality of our nursing schools and of nursing education. We are aware, also, of the fact that it is important to us to attract to our nursing school faculties young women of high standards, special abilities, and potentialities for progressive leadership. Not only is it important to attract these young women to our faculties, but it is important that we retain them, for a school program cannot have continuity with rapid faculty turnover. Our faculty turnover is quite rapid: is poor personnel administration frequently responsible for this rapid turnover? Do our personnel policies and practices for faculties of schools of nursing need to be improved?

What do we mean by personnel administration? What working and living conditions are included?

WHAT DO WE MEAN BY PERSONNEL ADMINISTRATION?

BY AGNES OHLSON, R.N.

What do we mean by personnel administration? What working and living conditions are included? Salary is only one factor; others are hours, workload, vacation, leaves of absence, sick leave, care during illness, opportunity for advancement, opportunity to grow and develop professionally and personally, personnel records, evaluation of work, living arrangements, opportunity of attending professional meetings and participating in professional activities within scheduled work hours, opportunity of sharing in policy formation for school and faculty, recognition of good or unusual work by such things as salary or promotion, definite delegation of duties and responsibilities, written policies developed co-operatively, adequate means of official communication, in-service education, guidance and professional counseling.

SOME CONDITIONS NURSING SCHOOL PERSONNEL LIKE LEAST ABOUT THEIR WORKING RELATIONSHIPS

BY SISTER M. ANICETA BREEN, R.N.

The problem of initiating or improving existing personnel administration in hospitals and schools of nursing requires serious analysis before solutions can be offered. During the past year numerous studies have been made of the qualitative and quantitative character of existing personnel policies and practices.

More emphasis should be given to the philosophical factors that enter into personnel administration in hospitals and public health agencies. Employers and employees who are guided by a true Christian philosophy of life will recognize the following factors when formulating personnel policies:
1. The physical, social, mental, aesthetic, moral, and intellectual capacity of the worker.
2. The quantity and quality of physical work to be done.
3. The dignity of man as a worker, as a patient, and as an administrator.
4. The social nature of man: desiring to earn a living wage, having obligations to society, being affected by the moral and natural law.
5. The ability of an individual to respect other persons in specific situations: employer and employee; employee and co-workers; employer, employee, and patients.
6. Each American has inalienable rights. Employer and employee should discover what is wanted or needed, then co-operatively decide upon the means of achieving their goal.

Through an analysis of existing personnel practices it has been learned that nurse employees appreciate certain statements in personnel administration. Following are examples of effective policies:

1. That co-operative personal relationships be established.
2. That there be reasonable hours, work-load, salary, vacation, economic security, insurance, hospitalization, procedure of transfer or promotion.
3. That conditions be conducive to contentment, satisfaction, and known appreciation of work well done.
4. That sufficient time be allowed to give adequate nursing care to patients, for supervision of nursing students, and to permit personal advancement.
5. That personnel administrator and hospital executives be aware of specific problems which interfere with progress of patients' recovery and nurses' education.
6. That standards in personnel administration and in bedside nursing be based on sound professional principles.
7. That employees be encouraged to express their interests, reactions, and problems associated with their work and personnel administration.
8. That more attention be given to psychological factors of employer and employee relationships in creating or promoting morale and efficiency.

Improvement of personnel policies and practices in schools of nursing can best be effected by concerted action in the governing boards of schools and hospitals. Reorganization of the administrative board and the school faculty, including selection of committees and determining their functions, is of paramount importance.

The committee on personnel administration would need to study what nurses want, what they need, what patients want and need, what nursing students want and need. Progress could then be made in discovering ways and means of begetting the co-operation of nurses, patients, and students in the formulation of policies and practices that will result in harmonious adjustments of all persons concerned.

Having learned the value of co-operative action, the committee must believe in the psychological, philosophical, and economical effects that will eventually result in improved service to the public. It is hoped that, having learned what is necessary and believing in its worth, the committee will take the third step: take action to improve or change existing policies. Written policies should be flexible and be representative of long-view planning. Adequate nursing personnel administration is known by its results in the improvement of the service through improvement of personal relationships between workers and their administrative officers.
GENEVIEVE K. BIXLER compared personnel policies and practices for nursing school personnel with those of other professional women in the community, using charts prepared by the American Red Cross to illustrate the differences in weekly pay, average cost of food and rent, and the amounts left over for clothes, expenses, taxes, savings, and so forth.

MARY S. TSCHUDIN discussed personnel policies and practices in effect in other fields for women that attract women to those fields, with particular emphasis on college and university faculties, teaching, business, research, and other professions.

JULIA M. MILLER talked about other professions or occupations for women with which the nursing profession must compete in securing the most desirable type of applicant: business and industry—sales managers, buyers, secretaries; teachers, home economic experts, designers, professions of medicine and law, and columnists.

MILDRED LORENTZ summarized the discussion by pointing out how the nursing profession could proceed in an attempt to improve personnel policies and practices for schools of nursing:

1. Study what women with similar preparation and experience receive and conditions under which they work and live.
2. Find out those factors with which faculty members are dissatisfied.
3. In each school have faculty conference groups study personnel practices and policies and recommend to larger groups what they want.
4. Develop a better understanding of the importance of good personnel administration in retaining valuable faculty members and in stabilizing and promoting the program of the school of nursing.
5. Have participation by a group concerned in the formulation of all policies that affect their working and living relationships.

Faculty positions in schools might be made more attractive to well-qualified young women, Miss Lorentz said, in the following ways:

1. By enhancing the human value of the individual more than the work to be done.
2. By tenure.
3. By adequately defining duties.
4. By granting freedom in setting up programs in order to achieve the objectives of the school.
5. By orienting new personnel to the organization and to their place in the organization.
6. By written personnel policies, co-operatively developed.
7. By having outgoing, constructive, flexible programs.
8. By offering an opportunity for individual growth and development.
10. By supplying adequate working tools and good physical environment.
11. By giving sufficient time to do a good job so that individuals have job satisfaction.
WHO SHALL PAY FOR NURSING EDUCATION?

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBR 26, 1946—8:30 P.M.

Presiding: RUTH SLEEPER, R.N., president of the National League of Nursing Education and director of the school of nursing and nursing service of the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, Mass.

WHO SHALL PAY FOR NURSING EDUCATION?

Chairman: LUTHER GULICK, Ph.D., president of the Institute of Public Administration, New York

The NLNE president, Ruth Sleeper, opened the meeting at 9:48 P.M., with the following remarks:

"One has only to review the historic development of nursing education, or the early reports of the American Society of Superintendents of Training Schools published about fifty years ago, or the more recent volumes of the National League of Nursing Education to realize that the topic to be discussed tonight in its relation to nursing is timeless, and in relation to the present socio-economic developments is, indeed, timely.

"The pioneers in nursing education called attention to the need for a sound economic basis for schools of nursing. The leaders in nursing education continue today to urge both consideration and action to meet this need, but the voices of women are easily drowned out in the many calls for the support of hospitals and other types of educational institutions. This problem is not one to be dealt with by nurses alone, nor is it one for nurses and hospitals and universities which now support nursing education. It is a public problem to be studied and solved by the community with the best possible advice from the lawmaker, the economist, the educator, the hospital director, the doctor, the citizen consumer, and the nurse. Such a group has joined us tonight to consider this topic, 'Who Shall Pay for Nursing Education?'

"It is indeed a privilege to have the honor to present to you Dr. Luther Gulick, educator, economist, president of the Institute of Public Administration, and chairman of this outstanding panel of friends of nursing. Dr. Gulick."

CHAIRMAN LUTHER GULICK: "Our panel this evening is really a very unusual gathering, in that you see here at the table a small group of individuals who are very keenly interested not only in the problems of nursing, nursing education, and the economics of paying for nursing education, but also in many other public problems.

"I want to tell you a word about the members of your panel. The gentleman at the extreme end of the table, to your left, is Dr. A. J. Brumbaugh, vice president of the American Council on Education. The American Council on Education is the leading private association of public and private institutions of higher learning. It has institutional members and individual members and is one of the authoritative central educational bodies, unofficial but nonetheless dealing with the official problems of education in the United States.

"Next to Dr. Brumbaugh is Dr. Esther Lucile Brown, director of the Department of Studies in the Professions of the Russell Sage Foundation. You will remember her writings in the field of nursing, the profession of nursing, and training for nursing.

"I am sure I don’t need to introduce to you the president of the National League of Nursing Education, Miss Ruth Sleeper, who introduced me to you a moment ago.

"Next, we have the very distinguished senator from Florida, Senator Claude Pepper. In addition to the great drive that he has given to nursing training and professional work in nursing, Senator Pepper has played a leading role in the whole social program of the government, especially during the war years.

"On the extreme end, to your right, we have Miss Agnes Gelinus, who is the chairman of the Department of Nursing of Skidmore College.

"I think you will see that thus we have at this table people drawn from education, from economics, from the field of nursing, from the field of the studies of professions as a whole, and a United States senator keenly interested in all problems in which we as citizens are concerned and an important contributor to social legislation.

"First of all we are going to talk very briefly about the major problems in the field of nursing education. Then, after we have cataloged a few of these major issues—and if you think of any that we don’t catalog you just hold the point in mind for a while and perhaps we will get around to it later—we are going to pass to those of the questions mentioned which seem to have a primary background in the field of finance, in the field of paying for the education of nurses. Then when we get through with the discussion we will endeavor to summarize the main points as they have come up here at the meeting this evening. I think you will see from this plan that the discussion that we are having is really a part of your whole Atlantic City program.

"So now I shall turn to my colleagues on the panel and ask them what they think are some of the major issues in the field of nursing education. To start the ball rolling I am going to take the liberty of calling on one of the ladies. So I shall ask Dr. Brown what she thinks the major issue is in the whole field of nursing education. Dr. Brown, what would be your answer?"
DR. BROWN: "It seems to me that one of the most important questions at the present time in nursing education is how we can provide a scientific training which is thoroughly educational and which will give the student a knowledge of science both in its principles and in its technical applications. I should like to include under science not only the physical, but the social, sciences. The question arises of how that training in scientific method and its application, both in the physical and the social sciences, can be provided to the best advantage."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "Now, there is a big question, and we will all hold that in mind as we look further ahead this evening into the discussion of problems of finance. I can already see the dollar sign in back of that question. Let's turn now and ask someone else to identify a major problem to place beside this question which we have just had from Dr. Brown. I wonder, Senator Pepper, if you want to throw in a point at this time."

SENATOR PEPPER: "I think one of the basic questions is to determine whether, if at all, and to what extent the public must provide a part of the support of nursing education."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "There is a very central problem. Must the public provide part of the support and, if so, to what extent?"

"Let's have another question, Dr. Brumbaugh, how about you?"

DR. BRUMBAUGH: "I should like to suggest two questions, Mr. Chairman. There is one which I think the profession must face very directly: namely, that of the selection of candidates in terms of aptitudes for nursing and of general competency for that field. As I have observed the training programs, there has been a very large attrition, and I think it has been due in part to lack of satisfactory selection in terms of adequate criteria. The second question relates to the organization of the curriculum, the relationship of practical experience, or laboratory experience, if you please, to the theoretical in order to make it strictly educational rather than a service function in relation to practical aspects of nursing itself."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "You can see that Dr. Brumbaugh is an educator and comes at this problem with two very keen educational questions, questions that can be raised in connection with education for any profession."

"I wonder, Miss Gelinbas, if you have any question you want to throw in now?"

MISS GELINAS: "I would like to say that the undergraduate nursing education in this country is largely on a profit-making basis. Through service and with cash, students in many instances are contributing an extremely high percentage of the cost of the school of nursing. The schooling provided thousands of students of nursing is so inferior and so limited that it leaves them unprepared to meet the demands made upon them as graduate nurses. The areas, I think, which need strengthening are in the field of tuberculosis nursing, psychiatric nursing, communicable disease nursing, and public health nursing."
CHAIRMAN GULICK: "There you see another approach to the problem which you might very well expect from someone directly connected with the supervision of nursing education. "Now I wonder if our president, Miss Sleeper, doesn't want to throw a question in at this point."

PRESIDENT SLEEPER: "I will speak in part for the service side. One of the big issues which we must face is the interrelationship of the nursing service and the school of nursing, the dependency of the nursing service upon the school, and the dependency of the school upon the hospital where the nursing service is given; and when we think of this interrelationship, we are immediately faced with a second issue. If the student is in a hospital to learn, where does learning end and where does the service begin?"

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "Now we have had a list of extremely important and basic questions thrown on the table. Just let me review them briefly. How are we going to provide a scientific education? How are we going to get both the physical and the social scientific elements in the nurse training program? Next, must the public assist in the support of the program and if so, to what extent? Next, what about the problem of the selection of the students who are going into nurse training so that they will really be headed for careers in nursing, careers that will be satisfactory to themselves? And then, what about the organization of the curriculum in the nursing institution so that it will furnish both the theoretical basis and the practical basis? This question is very closely related to Dr. Brown's question, the first one asked.

"Then we have the problem of education and the student and the extent to which the student is asked to contribute to meeting the costs of the education through the service that is rendered. This leads very directly to the question that Miss Sleeper asked: what about the service requirements of our hospitals and the relation of teaching to service and service to teaching? Where does learning end and service begin?

"I want to add one question to this total list that we must never forget, and that is your public. What about the public? The public wants good and competent nursing. The public knows that good and competent nurses can't be had without proper education, proper support, proper devotion of individuals to the career of nursing; and yet, on the other hand, the public is always short of funds and income, and there are large segments of the population who need nursing who can't pay for it, who are eager to have the costs kept at the lowest possible point and yet realize that even that isn't adequate to meet the full costs. So I want us to remember the public in this series of questions.

"I think we can see that all these questions cast up before us the problem of how you are going to pay for the total program, and particularly the question that Senator Pepper asks strikes directly at the question of public support, the extent of the responsibility, and the methods that shall be used.

"So that brings us to the next series of questions as to the financing of nursing education, and I am proposing that we will discuss first how nursing education is paid for today. Here again, I am going to turn to the members of the panel. This time I am not going to call on anybody specifically, but let anyone volunteer who wants to outline some of the present methods of financing nursing education in the United States."

President Sleeper: "There are about 6 per cent of our twelve hundred plus schools of nursing in universities. Those schools would therefore be supported as other university schools are supported—through endowment, through tuition fees of students, and, if they are state universities or city colleges, through tax support. The other 94 per cent of our schools of nursing are in hospitals. Some of those schools of nursing have some support from endowments, but that is on the whole very meager, and the number with endowments of any size is very few.

"The schools are supported to a small extent through the tuition fees of students and, to a very large extent, through the services which the students themselves render as they give nursing care to patients. And I should like to emphasize, to be fair to the hospital, that a part of that nursing care is laboratory or learning experience of the student. A large part of that care—and where the learning ends and where the service begins we do not know—is contributed by the student beyond the point of having learned her procedures and is a direct income to the hospital and to the school of nursing."

Chairman Gulick: "I wonder if anyone else in the round table wants to add any items to this very good and complete list that we have just heard. Are there any other types of contribution that should be included as the basis of financing of nursing education in the United States today? Are there any of the hospital schools that receive tax support today?"

President Sleeper: "The city hospitals, county, and state hospitals would come in that group."

Chairman Gulick: "So this is the picture: we have the support coming from taxation in a very small amount, not very much from endowments, some from gifts, a small amount from tuition, and all the rest from 'service.' We seem to have quite an unusual situation in the education of nurses as compared with other professions. Let us turn a minute to review the situation with regard to other professions.

"How do we train other professions in the United States? I think, Senator Pepper, this might be a point you would like to say something about."

Senator Pepper: "Of course, in both publicly and privately supported institutions other professional people are trained. I think it very pertinent that we should have also the same kind of institutions for the training of nurses. Engineers, for example, are trained in universities in the several states and in private engineering schools. Universities are supported by public funds in most cases. Private institutions are supported generally by gifts and by tuitions and by endowment. The same thing is true with respect to lawyers. The same is true with respect to doctors. So that, generally speaking, other professional people to a considerable extent have the facilities supported by public funds which make professional training possible for them, other than support for board and lodging during such training, which is customarily furnished by the individuals and their families.

"Public support for education must rest on the premise that the care of health is a matter of public concern. Health care should be financed like education, if our people are to get adequate nursing care. Nursing education should be financed like other professional education."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "What about ministers?"

SENATOR PEPPER: "Well, I believe, in the case of ministers, that they would probably be in the category of privately supported institutions."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "We have run over quite a list of professions. There are certain others that I think might also be mentioned. What about some of these new activities in the fields of nutrition and social work?"

SENATOR PEPPER: "I think in those fields it is again mixed. Some are educated in publicly supported institutions or they get public aid. In other cases they are privately supported."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "I wonder if we can think of any profession other than the minister of the Gospel in which almost the entire support is private. Of course, ministers frequently do take a lot of their preparation in philosophy and ethics and history through their colleges and universities."

SENATOR PEPPER: "And it must be added, Mr. Moderator, if I may interrupt, that their preliminary education which makes them eligible for the ministerial school has been to a considerable extent, or it may have been wholly, achieved at public expense. They may have gone to the public school."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "I think that is very true. It is really the finishing professional work that is exclusively handled in theological seminaries, Protestant, Catholic, Jewish institutions. There is one point I always want to make, and I hope the members of the panel agree with me on this: when we talk about private educational institutions in America, I think it is unfair to think of a private educational institution as not a public institution actually. It is tax exempt. We maintain it. We organize it under the law; we supervise it through departments of education. We give all sorts of special privileges to the institution, because that is part of the American way of providing for higher education, and if people of means wish to make gifts to such institutions, we exempt them from taxation. These institutions, though we call them private—like Yale and Columbia and Princeton, and the western universities, and the southern universities—though we call them private, actually, this represents just another method of providing education which the public regards itself as responsible for giving. So that I think we want to see clearly, when we talk about public and private, that the so-called private educational institution in America has a public responsibility which it recognizes and tries to meet in its educational program.

"I wonder, Dr. Brown, if you can think of any other professional group in America which receives its education so exclusively through the non-tax-supported institutions as do the theologians and the nurses. Is there any other group of that sort in America?"

Dr. Brown: "Practically all of professional education, as far as I know, has now come within the aegis of the college or the university. It happens that in certain professions you still have a few proprietary schools left. They are the remnants of something that is rapidly passing off the scene."

Chairman Gulick: "What do you mean by 'proprietary schools'?"

Dr. Brown: "For instance: in medicine—in 1910 when the Carnegie Foundation made the great study of medical education, probably more than half of the medical schools of the country were privately owned, privately operated medical schools, some of them reasonably good, a great many of them disgracefully bad. Now today there is scarcely a medical school which is not an integral part of a university.

"In the profession of law there was exactly the same situation a generation ago. A great many law schools were privately owned and operated for profit. Some were reasonably good and some very bad. Because the legal profession has exercised less control, and society has exercised less control, over law schools than over medical schools, we have some of those privately owned, or proprietary, law schools still in existence. As a matter of fact, there are about sixty of them in the country. But they have so sunk in public esteem that at the present time it is impossible for any privately owned law school to get recognition either by the Association of American Law Schools or by the American Bar Association, and one can almost postulate on paper the day when they will have to pass from the picture.

"The trend has been perfectly clear. The privately owned, privately operated school has been unable to meet the exigencies of education, which has become increasingly more expensive, which has increasingly made larger demands. So the university has taken over as the one institution, in most of these instances, which is equipped to provide what needed to be provided to render adequate professional education."

Chairman Gulick: "I think that opens up an extraordinarily important question for us as we talk about nursing and nursing education."

Dr. Brumbaugh: "Mr. Chairman, may I break in at this point?"

Chairman Gulick: "Surely."

Dr. Brumbaugh: "I would like to comment on what Dr. Brown has just said. I would hope that Dr. Brown's remarks would not be construed as tolling the death knell of the private colleges in the United States. I think there should be a clear differential made between the private proprietary, which is a profit-making institution, on the one hand, and the non-profit institution which, as Dr. Gulick has pointed out, is public in its service but private in its control. And I should like to point out in that connection that in the teaching profession until recently at least about half of the teachers in the secondary schools, and somewhat less than that in the elementary schools, came from the private colleges of the United States. We need to keep those in the picture from the standpoint of a distinctive type of service. I should like later to comment further on this matter of the function of the privately controlled institution that gives public service."

DR. BROWN: "That is a very excellent point that needed to be made."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "I think we all recognize that distinction between the proprietary, privately directed institution and the privately directed institution with a public purpose which is actually, as I said a few minutes ago, discharging a public responsibility and is, as a matter of fact, permitted to operate its educational institution in discharging a public trust because of the history and the traditions of our American education system. We will come back to that a little later.

"I want to ask Dr. Brown to expand that idea a little further on the gradual development that has taken place in professional education in America. What is the story in the other professions?"

DR. BROWN: "Before we had proprietary schools we had apprenticeship training in practically every profession. If you wanted to be a doctor you attached yourself to a practicing physician. If you wanted to be a lawyer you attached yourself to a practicing lawyer, and so it went. You read whatever books were available. You watched the practitioner doing his job. He gave you things to do. He supervised you both in your reading and your practice, as much as was possible. But you know perfectly well that that kind of a system is not adequate for very long.

"It is only when a society is very new or a profession very rudimentary that that is at all an adequate solution. Consequently, as time went on we saw very clearly that no private individual could give either the time, the skill, the money, the equipment, or the breadth of vision which was necessary for the training of a professional person. But as apprenticeship began to wear itself thin, the proprietary school appeared.

"The doctor, for instance, who had had one student under him in training decided that he might take six or eight or ten students. So he got a little building, and perhaps he got an assistant or two. Then he let it be known that he would take, for a specified remuneration, a certain number of students. The same thing was true in law, and the same thing was true in practically every profession in its early stages. If you have ever been up to Litchfield, Connecticut, you may have seen the tiny little house where one of our very famous judges had the Litchfield Law School. I would think that it might have been possible to have got within that tiny room from six to ten students. There were a few books. There was one man lecturing to the students. Even where the proprietary school became greatly expanded, its inadequacy soon became apparent.

"There has been a third device which has been used. It is the school operated by a service agency which felt the need for having trained personnel to work within that particular field. A good example is the school started by the Charity Organization Society of New York City, now known as the Community Service Society. It wanted to have some trained people to work in its agency, and so it said, 'We will create a school.'

"But after a time it wasn't satisfied with its school. Why? There was the same difficulty, in a less pronounced degree, that we have seen in these other instances. Practitioners who had to give most of their time to practice, who were not trained educators, who did not have very much of a scientific base, were trying to carry on an educational function as best they could. The Community Service Society presently decided that that wasn't the way to provide the best type of professional education, and so in the course of time the New York School of Social Work became part of Columbia University.

"I think the trend has been quite clear in most of the professional fields that we began in a rudimentary way with apprenticeship training. We passed into the era of the proprietary school, and then we eventually passed into the era where we are today, where most of our professional schools are under the control and the supervision of the college and the university, whether it be privately or publicly financed."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "There is one thing that comes up in this connection that is quite interesting to me, and that is this: How do you know when a given line of work is going to grow up into a profession? How do you know when it has the basis and the content that make it legitimate to call it a profession and to set up special educational work? I am going to leave that open to all members of the panel to see if they can give us a good answer on that.

"How about Miss Gelinas? How can you tell when a line of work ought to be a profession?"

MISS GELINAS: "I think when that line of work has a body of scientific principles underlying its techniques; and I think, also, it becomes professional when it has a definite public service content. In other words, if those people are serving the community, and if they have a body of knowledge that is theirs, based upon scientific principles, I think then that you can say that they are in the professional group."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "There are two very important elements, scientific background and public service.

"Senator Pepper, do you have a point?"

SENATOR PEPPER: "Mr. Chairman, I was merely going to observe that the statement made by Dr. Brown and the definition of profession which has been given by Miss Gelinas should lead us now to the conclusion that the nursing profession has grown up enough to get into the same category in which other professional training schools are. Nurses shouldn't any longer, to any serious degree, be treated like lawyers who used to read law in a lawyer's office, or like students who learned medicine along with a doctor in his office. There should be set up appropriate educational institutions to teach people and train them in the profession of nursing. We have come to the stage in the evolutionary process that Dr. Brown has so well told us about where people who are trained in the nursing profession are entitled to go to a nursing school which uses the hospital as a laboratory but not as a place where you do chores.

"Nursing education must become part of the curriculum of our recognized higher institutions. Its professional character and face must be lifted to that level. It should not be wholly part of our hospital system, to which most of our schools of nursing are attached. However, there is no reason why nurses should not serve internship like doctors and other medical personnel."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "It sounds almost as though the Senator had had a nursing education.

"Thus far in our discussion we have gotten a pretty clear agreement in the round table that nursing has come of age as a field of occupation in which there is a body of scientific knowledge which can be passed on through the educational process, that there is a conscious feeling among the group that they constitute a profession, a feeling of responsibility to the community, a feeling of responsibility for the discharge of their functions."

DR. BRUMBAUGH: "Mr. Chairman, may I ask if that suggests, also, that an added element of this consciousness on the part of the profession itself is that certain minimum standards are set, either by the profession or by agencies, that determine qualifications for the profession which must be met before an individual participates in that particular professional activity?"

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "Yes. And I think it is also true, isn't it, that in all our professions we have a rather important ceremony, you might say, on the induction of the individual into the profession. That is part of the consciousness of the existence of the profession. The doctors take their oath. The lawyers go through various specific requirements and are admitted to the Bar.
Those who go into the teaching profession take their specific degrees in very important ceremonies with long black robes from the Middle Ages. So that the consciousness of the group and its sense of responsibility, the necessity of meeting certain standards, the scientific content of the work—all of these are factors that enter into the picture, and I think we don't need to argue long, particularly before this group, to show that all of those factors are present now in graduate nursing."

MISS GELINAS: "Mr. Moderator, I think I would like to bring out one other point. The professional knowledge should become public knowledge and, therefore, we can call it public education; and in this country which believes so strongly in public education and supports public education in the other fields, certainly nursing education should receive as adequate financial support as medical education, social service education, and teacher education."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "I can see that Miss Gelinas has already reached the conclusion of the round table. That won't prevent us, however, from going on to discuss exactly the point that she has raised: that if we recognize that education for nursing has now reached this point, we come to the question of how should it be organized, how should it be set up, and how should it be financed?

"We are not, tonight, going to discuss how it ought to be organized and how it ought to be set up except very indirectly in connection with the problem of financing. Dr. Brumbaugh said a minute ago that when we reached this point he wanted to say something about the responsibility of the privately directed educational institution. Do you think, Dr. Brumbaugh, that nursing education should be carried on primarily in our public institutions because of this great public interest, or is it something that the private institution should also be concerned with?"

DR. BRUMBAUGH: "Mr. Chairman, I come back to the point that you made—that the private institutions are primarily private in control but public in function. Being private in control, they are in some respects freer to experiment and to blaze the trail educationally than are institutions under public control. I would, therefore, certainly hope that private institutions might be active participants in a program of nurses' education, as they are in programs of education in other fields.

"The point I wanted to make more particularly, however, relates to the suggestion made by Miss Gelinas that the institution should be publicly supported. If we say that the institution should receive public support, Federal or state, we immediately raise a question of policy with reference to a good many states where there are statutes forbidding public funds to be used by private institutions, going back to the earlier belief that religious institutions particularly should be independent of the state."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "I wonder if any member of the round table has the feeling that nursing education should be confined to public institutions or private institutions, or do we need both of them in the field? I wonder, Miss Sleeper, if you could speak on that?"

PRESIDENT SLEEPER: "I think there is no doubt that we need both types of institutions and both types of support for institutions. I was interested to find, among notes which Miss Pfefferkorn had brought to the meeting tonight and gave to me to support my statement, that there are now employed in Government hospitals some 60,000 nurses, and in state health agencies some 15,000 nurses. If we are to have a total of 75,000 nurses employed in tax-supported institutions, it would seem only right today that tax-supported institutions should carry their share, or, if I put it the other way around, that tax support should be given to institutions which are to prepare nurses. On the other hand, a very large number of nurses are employed in private agencies, hospitals, and health agencies, and those hospitals and health agencies should also carry a share of the preparation of the nurses whom they are to employ. In other words, it should be both private and public."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "I wonder, Senator Pepper, in view of these figures that we have just heard about the number of nurses employed in tax-supported institutions, if you anticipate that in the years that lie ahead government programs are going to call for a larger number of individuals trained in nursing."

SENATOR PEPPER: "Oh, unmistakably so, Mr. Moderator. For example, just before the Congress recessed we added about ten million dollars of funds to the Children's Bureau for maternal and child care, for crippled children, and for child welfare. There will be more nurses required in the carrying out of that program.

"We also enacted the first National Mental Health Act. Unfortunately, we have neglected that field of illness too long. So we added ten million dollars to the funds that the Federal Government may use in demonstration programs and in co-operation with the states. One million dollars of that ten million dollar addition may be used for demonstrations, personnel, and the training of psychiatric personnel. It is estimated that if an adequate mental health program, both at the Federal and state levels, were carried out with sufficient funds, at least 15,000 psychiatric nurses and 15,000 attendants would be necessary. In addition to that, the Surgeon General, upon the recommandation of the National Advisory Mental Health Council, can grant moneys to nursing schools to raise the general level of undergraduate and graduate work in psychiatric nursing. Would you like me to mention pending legislation?"

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "I think that would be very helpful."

SENATOR PEPPER: "I should also add to the legislation that has recently been enacted the Hospital Survey and Construction Act. That allows seventy-five million dollars a year for the next five years for the construction of hospitals over the country. I regret to say that some of our people who thought they were saving Federal money imposed the condition that the Federal Government would put up only one out of every three dollars spent for hospital construction. I now understand that officials of one state have already protested that they would not be able to meet their matching requirement of putting up two state dollars for every one Federal dollar. No one knows better than the nurses who are here that the need is often greatest in the areas where the means to meet the needs are least.

"In addition to that, we have under consideration for the future the Wagner-Murray-Dingell National Health Bill. If that should pass, of course, it would be the principal task of that system to provide medical and laboratory, or hospital and some dental, and a great deal of home nursing care to the majority of the people in the United States, more than 100,000,000 of our population, and no one can estimate the number of thousands of new nurses that would be required for that.

"Some of us were authors of the Maternal and Child Welfare Bill, which will be re-introduced at the coming of the next Congress, and that looks forward to the day—at least, it contemplates an expenditure of one hundred million dollars a year for the first year, and of one hundred and forty million dollars for the second year, and after that there is no limit but the amount you can get out of the Congress the rest of the time. That contemplates that eventually the mothers and the children of this country, all of them, will be properly cared for and that there will be trained personnel who can take care of them.

"So you can see the many thousands of nurses that will be required to carry out that program. For example, it is estimated that the full program would require for hospital care of children 17,200 additional professional nurses, 4600 administrative and supervisory nurses, 13,000 student nurses; for obstetric care, 74,000 additional professional nurses, 9900 administrative and supervisory nurses, and 12,800 student nurses.

"Senator Murray, Senator Morse, and I have introduced a bill which contemplates a ten-year program of educational assistance. That bill could be interpreted to include nursing education as well as the other kinds of education that are embraced within that bill. Incidentally, that allows aid to private schools. I am thoroughly in accord with what has been said that a method can be provided by which aid can be given to private institutions, under proper safeguards, as to public institutions.

"I would venture just a rule of thumb guess, Mr. Moderator, that I will be sorely disappointed and society in this country will grievously suffer, if we don't more than double the number of nurses we now have in the next five years."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "And I am wondering, Senator, what happens to all this legislation for the benefit of mothers and the children, and thus for the whole population of the country, if we don't have competent administrators, competent medical service, competent nursing service, and other competent administration to carry out and enforce the legislation; what happens to all the good work?"

SENATOR PEPPER: "Without the administration, the laws fail. And what is more, I think it is common knowledge, if not professionally sound, that, as far as we men are concerned, if we couldn't get both the doctor and the nurse, we would rather have the nurse.

"I think that everybody agrees that the nurse is an essential part of competent medical care, and without the nurse the doctor cannot give adequate medical care to the patient.

"Now, I think it will probably be true that we will have to train a certain number of practical nurses who will be able just to provide care, largely assume the role of the attendant to the patient; but it is very important that we start nurses to aid in this program right away, because we are going to pass legislation faster than nurses can be trained adequately, if we don't speed up our training processes."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "Exactly."

MISS GELINAS: "I think we ought to inject a little note here. We are all aware of the shortages that exist now in nursing, and I think, too, that those of us in the profession are aware of the inadequacies of some of the schools that now exist. Some of the small poor schools of nursing must be closed. Taxation money, if it is to be made available, should be given to the good schools of nursing, the accredited schools of nursing, and the schools that have available to them rich clinical facilities, because those of us in education realize, certainly, that we need an immense improvement in some of the schools of nursing that we have in this country."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "I notice, Miss Gelinas, you spoke of the need of rich clinical facilities in connection with a school of nursing. I am wondering if the public as a whole understands how expensive it is to provide a good nursing education. I wonder if any member of the panel can throw some light on that."

MISS GELINAS: "I don't think that the people of the United States, the richest nation in the world, the nation that believes in free public education, realize how pitifully unsupported the American schools of nursing are."

DR. BROWN: "Could I give an example from medicine at this point? I think there is no question but that professional education is expensive, and we should assume that it must be expensive. I happened to be visiting a particular university in this country when the report of the American Medical Association arrived after the second grading of medical schools. The medical school of this particular university found itself in about thirty-fifth place out of seventy-six schools. It was at the moment spending a half million dollars a year on its medical school. The dean said to me, 'This is a disgrace. We are in thirty-fifth place. We have got to get ourselves up to ninth or tenth place. Therefore, we propose to spend another quarter of a million per year.' This made three quarters of a million for a relatively small school.

'I asked the dean, 'Do you think it is such a disgrace to be thirty-fifth place among seventy-six medical schools, when it happens that medical schools have been raised to such a very high level that it is going to be practically impossible for your school to reach ninth or tenth place?' But that university was prepared to spend the additional amount even at the expense of other types of professional education. That same university had no school of nursing. It had a very poorly supported law school.

'Professional education is an expensive thing. Society must learn that it is expensive but that we can find means of support. We must, however, make up our minds that we have got to sit down and do some considering on paper as to the allocation of those funds within the professional schools of the university. Otherwise, one school is going to profit at the expense of another school."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "I wonder, Dr. Brumbaugh, if you think that the clinical aspect of nursing education, that is, the utilization of practical experience in a hospital and in other situations, is an important part of the education?"

DR. BRUMBAUGH: "Mr. Chairman, I have worked in the field of general education for many years. I am thoroughly convinced of the indispensability of so-called practice teaching, or apprentice teaching, as a part of the preparation of the teacher. I think it is impossible to have an individual get the point of view of the classroom, to understand how children respond in a learning situation, unless she actually works in the situation that is representative of her own professional objective.

"I think it is equally true that laboratory experience must be an indispensable part of the training of the nurse. I should like, however, to stress the fact that laboratory experience must be focused wholly upon professional training and must have educational significance in terms of that professional training. If the experience goes beyond the point of educational significance, it means that an individual is being exploited for a noneducational purpose in an institution rather than having all of the experience focused upon an educational objective. That is one of the difficulties that I have observed in programs of nurses' education at the present time. There isn't a clear distinction between that indispensable kind of laboratory experience that is an inseparable part of good training and that service experience that goes beyond the indispensable aspects of training."

Senator Pepper: "Dr. Brumbaugh, I am sure we have the same idea about the necessity of laboratory experience in any professional training; but in the training of the doctor we don't have the medical student go to work in the doctor's office and sweep it out in the morning, and fold the doctor's mail for him, and try to help him collect his bills, and go home and visit the doctor's family in case of an emergency, and so on. The student goes to a doctor's office or he goes to a hospital as a part of his regular curriculum, unless he is so poor that he has to get work somewhere. In that event he probably gets better pay somewhere else than in the doctor's office.

"So I know that when you say that the laboratory is essential, you mean that laboratory work—and of course, that means to a considerable degree work in a hospital—should be a part of the curriculum. But you don't necessarily mean that the students should all have to do these chores. For example, I noted a figure that I saw the other day that in hospitals where there are student nursing schools, the nurses devote four and two-fifths times as much time to the patients as in hospitals which do not have those schools. This fact indicates that a lot of the work that is done by practical nurses and attendants in hospitals where they don't have schools has to be done by the student nurses in these hospitals with schools."

Dr. Brumbaugh: "I thoroughly agree with you, Senator, and that is exactly what I had in mind earlier when I said that we need to review the whole curriculum of nursing education. I am inclined to think that there is a lot of water in terms of this routine dusting up and cleaning up type of activity in the curriculum that could be squeezed out and the curriculum be made much more professional in character within the same time limit as at present."
SENATOR PEPPER: "Excuse me for interfering again, but under the system that we now have, isn't it a fact that practically every student nurse is almost required to work her way through nursing school?"

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "That seems to be the testimony growing out of the statistics that Miss Sleeper presented at the very opening of our discussion. You remember, I raised the question a moment ago about the cost of the clinical part of nursing education? I think Miss Sleeper has some figures on that."

PRESIDENT SLEEPER: "I had before me the Pfefferkorn and Rovetta Administrative Cost Analysis for Nursing Service and Nursing Education.* I think it is interesting in relation to this discussion to cite three schools very briefly. At the time this study was made, at these three schools the costs of care of the student, maintenance of the student, care while she was ill, support of the library and the entire educational program per student ranged per year from $70 to $747 dollars, and of those amounts only one-sixth went toward education.

"Now, clinical education may be expensive education, but it is not expensive in the way it is being given to student nurses today in very many schools. Miss Pfefferkorn's study re-emphasizes again the fact that about one-sixth of the total expenditure for the nursing student is spent for general instructional purposes. I wonder if Dr. Brumbaugh can tell us what part of the total expenditure per student is spent for general instruction in colleges and universities."

DR. BRUMBAUGH: "I can't give a precise ratio offhand, but usually administrative and general maintenance costs in a college or university will constitute between 40 and 50 per cent of the total budget, which means that about 50 per cent of the expenditures in the institution will be devoted directly to faculty instruction: that is, faculty salaries and to activities that are distinctly educational in character. That would include the operation of the library and all those activities that are set up directly for the education of the students. But certainly the ratio would be quite different from that which has just been given."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "So then we see that as to finance, we have another point at which nursing education differs very markedly from the system we use in other types of American education.

"We are going to continue for a few minutes longer our general discussion. In the meantime, we would be very happy to have some questions from the audience. Now you see we admit that there is an audience and that we are not meeting just by ourselves here at this table. We would like to take you into the discussion. I am going to ask the ushers to pass through the hall. Write down your questions. We will try to answer them as they come up."

"In the meantime, we still have a number of questions of our own that we want to bring up in the discussion. I want to ask the members of the round table what one change in the American system of education of nurses would have the most important effect in helping us to solve this problem of the financing of nursing education. What one thing could we do that would have the biggest effect? I am going to start with Miss Gelines."

Miss Gelines: "One thing we could do to help nursing education would be to place the control of the school of nursing under educational auspices, preferably in the college or university."

Chairman Gulick: "I am wondering if any member of the round table has any different emphasis that he or she wants to give to the answer that Miss Gelines has just given."

Senator Pepper: "Mr. Chairman, I thoroughly agree with the suggestion Miss Gelines has just made that nursing education be taken out of the practical sphere, where it is now, and be put into an appropriate educational institution. I think we will have to see, however, what the consequence of that would be and make provision for it. As has been pointed out and as we have learned in some studies, in many hospitals the value of the services performed by the student nurses exceeds the value of the instruction which they have received. That fact is not true in all hospitals, and there are many in which it would be grossly untrue, but it is applicable to many institutions.

"However, the question 'Who Shall Pay for Nursing Education?' really becomes one of broad social policy. The question really becomes 'Who Shall Really Pay for Nursing Education?' While the student may pay for his tuition, loans, and board in whole or in part, it is really the public and the patient who should pay for nursing education, if they are to expect high quality public and private nursing care, for at the present time, the public and the patient are really paying in poor health care for a deterioration in nursing service by reason of increased fees accompanied by a shortage of nurses and a relative decline in enrollments in nursing schools.

"Higher pay, shorter hours, improvement of working conditions, provision of social security benefits, and other proposals would assist in relieving the situation and are really the best solutions. But these remedies alone will not solve the problem.

"The time has come when every person in this country must be provided with adequate medical care, services, and facilities. In national planning for good health, provision must be made for adequate nursing care. High quality nursing service can only be provided with sufficient personnel, well trained in the basic principles of nursing and in specialized fields of nursing. Some means must be found to finance nursing education. At present about 75 per cent of the income of nongovernmental hospitals is derived from patients' fees, which help to pay for student nursing service in hospitals, the monetary value of which is often as great as, and sometimes greater than, the total cost of providing their education.

"The public and the patient must pay for nursing education, if high quality nursing care is to be provided for our people. The National Mental Health Act is a step in this direction. Passage of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill, the Maternal and Child Health and Welfare bill, and the Murray-Pepper-Morse Education bill, would further nursing education and thereby raise the level of high quality nursing care to the benefit of the American people.

"I think we will have to come to the time when hospitals will be serving their patients through regular, trained graduate nurses, and that there will have to be a system worked out by which the patients will be able to pay a fair rate; I mean by that, a fair remuneration that will entitle the nurse rendering the nursing service to a decent livelihood. We have got to provide a system that will enable the patients to pay what their nursing care is worth. When we do that, we will add a great deal to the accomplishment that Miss Gelinhas has suggested—that nursing education be taken out of the hospital and be put into the educational institution."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "I wonder what our next task is going to be, then, when we reach this conclusion among ourselves here at this table, and you people here in the hall, that nursing education has reached a point in American history where it cannot be left purely on an apprentice basis—where it has become a problem of preparing properly selected young women and young men for nursing service in educational institutions directed by educational authorities rather than by service institutions interested in some other function. And then, as Senator Pepper has just said, in the process we mustn't forget that we make a profound change in the nature of the service problem, particularly of our hospitals. When we reach those conclusions, what do we do about them? What is the next thing that we have to do?

SENATOR PEPPER: "I think the first thing is to encourage public institutions supported by public funds to install appropriate and approved nursing schools, so that they will have nursing schools just as they have other professional schools. I am sure that if the public health services of the country, so ably staffed, and people interested in public health in the country got behind that kind of program, they could give great momentum to that proposal and it would be successful. In the second place, the public and the Federal and state governments could give assistance to private institutions in the form of grants-in-aid for the nursing education they have made possible. This would help to provide the facilities in which nursing education might be acquired. But there will always be the problem of assisting the individual to take advantage of that. Even if the teachers and the buildings and the books and the tuition and the fields—if these were all provided out of some other funds, the student would always have to pay board and lodging and provide clothes and that sort of thing. So I think we have to set up a system of scholarships and fellowships which will be very generously supported by public funds to allow competent people to enter into nursing training."
"In the next place, I think we have got to provide in certain cases, probably, loan assistance, although I prefer the scholarship method rather than the loan method, because we know what it is to be burdened down for many years of your life with a loan. But I think adequate scholarships, adequate fellowships, certainly if they are adequate in amount and if the total amount available is adequate, can do a great deal to solve the problem of the individual student."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "There is a very comprehensive answer as to the total program. I wonder if any member of the round table would want to add any points."

MISS GELINAS: "I would like to strengthen Senator Pepper's statement a little bit in this way, and say that I think that the Federal Government must set up a system of nationwide scholarships which will provide the well-qualified student who is economically handicapped with sufficient funds to study in any accredited school of nursing, private or public, so that she may choose the school of her choice and not be restricted by state boundaries."

PRESIDENT SLEEPER: "Mr. Chairman, I would like to say a word as to gifts from private individuals to private schools, private colleges carrying on nursing programs, and private funds given for scholarship aid. I think that only as we can interest the citizenry in this whole problem will we be entirely successful. People are far too apt to feel that if the Government will do it, they then have no individual responsibility. We know now in our nursing organization the value of lay participation and that lay participation takes various forms. It has been tremendously helpful to us in upgrading our nursing schools and especially in upgrading our nursing services. I think we should not leave out the private citizen."

DR. BROWN: "It seems to me that both the suggestions that have been made as to public assistance and private assistance are excellent. In order that we may get that assistance, and in order that we may have some more Senator Peppers who will help us to get provisions for enlarged health services through the Congress, I would like to suggest that the national and the state nursing associations put on a very large program of public education."

"I look at your profession with a tremendous amount of interest, but also with some comprehension of how little society knows about your professional education, about the situation that you face in your relationship to the hospital, about the financial difficulties. You have an enormous story which must be told. It must be told consistently and persistently all over the country, if you are going to have the informed lay people who can help you either with private gifts or who can help you in the Congress of the United States."

MISS GELINAS: "I think there is another very important group who must help us in nursing education. That is the group that owns and operates the hospital. We have one of the finest teaching fields in the world in the hospital, and we must ask these hospitals—medical, surgical, pediatric, obstetric, psychiatric, tuberculosis, cancer hospitals—to help us in this educational program for student nurses. We certainly need their support and help.”

Senator Pepper: “May I interpolate this, lest there be any misunderstanding about the suggestion that public assistance should be given. I think all of us will agree that under our system of government and our theory of society, we never think of public funds except to supplement private funds. However, where private funds have not brought about a situation which the public interest requires, then rather than let the situation be to the detriment of the public, public funds would have to be provided.

“Today, for example, I understand that we have a shortage of approximately 42,000 nurses. Now, the public has an interest in having—if that is the right number—42,000 more competent nurses to attend the public. We pay policemen to guard us at the street intersections against accidents, and we pay other people who are our public servants. What more desirable class of people to serve the public could be found than those 42,000 additional nurses that we need right now?

“So if the Public Health Service were to get from Congress an appropriation that would enable them through fellowships—Miss Gelines was completely correct—to go anywhere they might choose to go in any part of the country or to any educational institution, surely it would be proper for the Congress to make it proper for the Public Health Service to aid enough students to enter schools of nursing to provide the nurses the public needs at the present time.”

President Sleeper: “We need graduate nurses. Under the Bolton Act the funds were given to the students for the purpose of furnishing nursing service to the hospitals. We were in a war emergency. Today, to a degree, we are still in an emergency. Perhaps in nursing the emergency is greater. But if we are making any far-range plans for nursing education and how to pay the costs of nursing education, we must be sure—and I am sure Senator Pepper included this in his thinking—that we don’t give scholarships to the students and then expect the student to go into the hospital and earn her education all over again. That can easily happen. Now, if we give scholarships we must give them for nursing education.”

Chairman Gullick: “I don’t want to stop this very interesting part of the discussion, but I do want to get on to part of the bushel-basketful of little slips that are being handed up to me. As we look over these, we find a great many questions that we are going to be unable to reach tonight. I shall turn them right over to the association, and I am sure you will find a very provocative article in the Journal one of these days built out of the questions that we are unable to tackle here. Quite a few of the questions do not relate specifically to the questions of financing, so we are setting those aside; and I am sure you will understand that though we permit ourselves to wander, we don’t permit you to wander into these other inviting fields.

“One set of questions speaks very specifically about the possible dangers to education from the receipt of tax funds through the systems of Federal aid or state aid. I am going to ask first Miss Sleeper to talk on that point, and then second, I am going to ask Dr. Brumbaugh to talk about the effect of Federal aid and state aid upon education in other areas. Then I am going to ask Senator Pepper to talk about that one point, because I think it is of very great importance: is it dangerous for nursing education, or any other type of education in America, to receive public support in the form of taxation? First we will ask Miss Sleeper to talk on that point."

President Sleeper: "In nursing we see public support from taxation in two types of schools—one, let us say, the city or the county or the state hospital. Actually, that money is not given to conduct a nursing school. I am quite sure if we could look at the objectives of those who appropriate the tax, we would find that that money was given to take care of the patients in those hospitals. Therefore, in the strict sense of the word, that is not public support for nursing education. Nursing education is a by-product.

"We also see money given through tax support to state universities which conduct schools of nursing. There we find that the program is on an educational basis, and the tax support certainly does not seem to be in any way detrimental. It is extremely beneficial. During the war period we saw public moneys given to student nurses, and some to schools of nursing under the Bolton Act—tremendous sums. I think in spite of all the things that happened to us in schools of nursing during the war period, we owe a very great debt to the United States Public Health Service and to Congress, which passed the Bolton Act, for the upgrading of nursing education that came through the splendid efforts of the United States Public Health Service representatives."

Dr. Brumbaugh: "Mr. Chairman, you asked me to comment on the broader aspects of Federal aid to education. May I point out several distinct principles or problems that are involved. First with reference to state aid—and I assume that some of the proposals here would be that there would be support from state taxation to schools of nursing just as there might be to other schools, that some of those would be public and some would be private as far as control is concerned."

Chairman Gulick: "I think the proposal is that if public funds are required for nursing education, nursing education should be treated no differently than other types of professional education in America. Therefore, there would be, as you suggest, both a Federal program and very extensive state programs, as there already are in connection with other types of professional education."

Dr. Brumbaugh: "On that assumption then, may I point out as I implied once before, that in some states there are statutes prohibiting the use of public funds for the support of private educational institutions of any type, that in other states there are provisions whereby public funds are given somewhat generously to private institutions, on the theory that those private institutions are rendering a public service. I think there will not be insurmountable difficulties, but there will be delays in some states in overcoming that particular hurdle if appropriations are made to private as well as to publicly supported institutions.

"The same question arises in a different form with reference to Federal aid. One of the fundamental issues that has been raised all along about Federal legislation appropriating funds for the aid of education has been:
What about the control of education? Public policy has vested control of education in the respective states.

"If we go to an increased program of Federal support of education, does not that very fact pave the way to Federal control of education in those areas in which the Federal Government provides the support, and are we, therefore, going contrary to a long-established public policy as far as control of education is concerned? That is a very fundamental issue. It is for that reason that I believe that a large part of this support should be given in the forms of scholarships and fellowships to individuals who, in turn, should choose the institutions they wish to attend. By payments of adequate tuition and adequate living costs, the budgets of those institutions would be supported without injecting the dual question of state versus private control within the state, or of Federal versus state control."

SENATOR PEPPER: "Mr. Chairman, to be both a little facetious and serious at the same time: I have said the only danger would be to disease, because I think there is no danger to the public interest. It is all public funds to be used in the training of nurses or in providing facilities for such training.

"Dr. Brumbaugh is correct in stating that it is the theory of our institutions that the Federal Government, when it aids in an educational program or in a hospital program, while it may lay down certain general standards, does not usurp the administrative function of the local government or of the state government. We recognize that integrity on the part of the local governments in the hospital in the construction program which we have just enacted.
If we will go back in our history we will recall that some of the oldest of our state institutions, the land grant colleges, received their origin largely through Federal grants of land. Yet the Federal Government never tried to interfere with the curricula of those institutions or with the personnel of the faculty or administrative staffs. We have had the Smith-Hughes Act on the statute books of the nation for many years. That is where we give assistance to colleges and schools—in giving vocational training. Yet the Federal Government has never interfered in the actual administration of the institutions that are the recipients of that aid.

"Many of us are advocating Federal aid for public schools in the country because many of our poorer states are not able to give our children the minimum standards of education that an American child should receive. We are trying to provide through the Federal Government an equalization fund to try to equal the disparity in provisions for the children and the wealth of this country as it is distributed, because the children are the citizens of the United States under our constitution as well as of the individual states.

"Recently we found from our committee's survey that about 50 per cent of the men examined for Selective Service were rejected for mental or physical deficiencies of one sort or the other. The first requirement of the Federal Government under our constitution is to provide for the common defense.
Yet if our men and women can't defend America against an enemy, the Federal Government suffers. So when the Federal Government contributes to the education or the health of the American people, it is providing in a very proper way for the strength of the public. So the only thing we need concern ourselves about is that we properly exercise the Federal power to assist in furnishing this necessary professional education."

DR. BRUMBAUGH: "Mr. Chairman, I feel greatly encouraged by the point of view that Senator Pepper expresses and would agree with him perfectly if I could have the same confidence that all the other members with whom he is associated in Congress share his point of view."

SENATOR PEPPER: "You remember that congressmen are elected every two years, and senators every six years, and the president every four years, so I think the people will always be able to impose reasonable safeguards even upon their Congress."

DR. BRUMBAUGH: "May I say further that what Senator Pepper has pointed out is decidedly true. I made a study recently of the Federal Government's participation in support of education, and I found in the last biennial report of the United States Office of Education that the Federal Government had made direct appropriations for educational purposes to higher education alone amounting to five hundred million dollars, which was half as much as the total budget for higher education in the United States.
I can foresee those appropriations growing and expanding, and I think it is absolutely necessary that they should. We must remember that the Federal Government has imposed on all citizens an income tax which has limited greatly the resources within the states for educational purposes and for other social needs. With the allocation of one of the major sources of income to the Federal Government, there must go a corresponding responsibility for appropriating some of this income back to the states.

"But let me emphasize one thing. I certainly hope that the Senator and all of those who have an interest in this matter will stand pat on the fact that we shall not require the states to match in any way what the Federal Government provides, because by so doing we defeat the purpose of equalization. The states that have ample funds are able to match appropriations, and the states that don't have the funds are not able to match them. The provision that states must match Federal funds defeats the purpose for which an equalization fund is set up."

SENATOR PEPPER: "I am glad you emphasized that, Doctor. Especially is that true in the rural areas. As we all know, they are in many sections of the country the worst served and the least able to put up any kind of contribution."

CHAIRMAN GULICK: "We have now reached the time when it is the duty of the chairman to end the discussion. As you can see, we started out with a broad consideration of the major problems in the nursing field. We picked out those problems which were financial in character, which called for a new recognition on the part of the American people of a need for support and for service. This led us to discuss the existing basis of support and the areas of need for the future.

"On the basis of the evidence we concluded that nursing can no longer rest solely upon a practical basis or an apprenticeship training, but that it must now recognize its scientific foundation and, therefore, its need for professional education. In other words, nursing education has outgrown its apprenticeship approach and must now take its place with other professions. Though recognizing the need for clinical work, especially in hospitals, as part of nursing education, we condemned the all too prevalent practice of relying on nurse trainees to carry a large part of the domestic drudgery of the hospital, devoting a disproportionate amount of their time to work of little educational value, and thus being forced to pay for their own education in ways long abandoned for other types of professional education.

"As a cure for this situation we agreed that the most important single thing for the future is to place nursing education under the control of educational institutions, making the proper adjustment in the service institutions so that their needs will be properly met, and at the same time recognizing that we must readjust the methods of paying for hospital care and other nursing service so that people will not be deprived of service by reason of this change.

"Then Senator Pepper put forward a number of immediate practical steps—the desirability of initiating nurse training courses and schools as parts of our larger educational institutions or other institutions where proper clinical facilities can be arranged in the neighborhood or in not too distant centers; the development of public aid, both Federal and state, following the pattern of other education—other professional education in the United States—thus making ample room for the private institution as well as the public institution in the program; the development of a program of aid to individuals so that they may select the institutions to which they go.

"Then the point was made that we must help the public to understand this whole problem of the function of nursing and the importance of nursing as an element in the administration of the expanding social legislation which we have before us. We must also help the public to understand the necessity of adequate finance so that nursing, which has now come through its early period of evolution, may now take its proper place as a mature and responsible profession. We thank you."

PRESIDENT SLEEPER: "We wish to thank Dr. Gulick and all of the members of the panel who have spoken so effectively to us tonight.

"The meeting is adjourned."
CLOSING BUSINESS SESSION
FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1946—9:15-12:30 A.M.

The closing business session was called to order by the president at 9:15 A.M. The roll call indicated that representatives of 36 states were present.

NEXT STEPS TO BE TAKEN IN THE STRUCTURE STUDY

The first item to be considered was the recommendations to the membership from the Board of Directors in relation to the structure study, which had been discussed at the business meeting on Wednesday. Mimeographed copies of the revised "Suggestions Regarding Next Steps" were distributed to those present. These revisions were based upon suggestions that had been received from the NOPHN during the sessions.

"NEXT STEPS" AS RECOMMENDED BY RAYMOND RICH ASSOCIATES AND REWORDED BY THE NATIONAL LEAGUE OF NURSING EDUCATION
SEPTEMBER 26, 1946

1. That the board of directors of each participating professional nursing organization nominate for election by a business meeting of its governing body a number of candidates, of which five nurses and one lay member are to be elected to serve as official representatives on an enlarged Structure Committee.

2. That each board request its governing body to authorize these representatives, jointly with the representatives of the other organizations on the enlarged Structure Committee, to:
   a. Develop means of explaining to the respective membership bodies the various structure recommendations and obtaining their opinions thereon.
   b. Study and report recommendations regarding any revisions in the "Structure Report" to all the participating organizations.
   c. Devise procedures for electing delegates and convening a joint reorganization convention, or constitutional convention.
   d. Prepare for submittal to the constitutional convention for consideration and adoption with or without modifications:
      (1) Drafts of constitutions and bylaws
      (2) Recommended procedures for giving effect to the action of the constitutional convention
   e. Arrange for ratification of the final actions of the constitutional convention by each organization.
   f. Participate in the joint raising of necessary funds.
   g. Take such other measures as may be found necessary to give effect to the desires of the governing bodies.

3. That each board of the participating organizations submit to its governing body a motion authorizing a contribution to the joint Structure Committee of .......... cents per member, the contribution to be made from the funds of each organization.

The president explained the revisions. With regard to item 1, having to do with the election of official representatives to the enlarged structure committee, the president reported that the National Organization for Public Health Nursing had elected six representatives instead of five in order that their lay members, who are very important members of their organization, might be represented. They had elected four nurse and two lay members. Miss Sleeper said that, since there should be equal representation from all organizations on the enlarged structure committee, the League, also, should have six representatives, possibly one of whom should be a lay member. She said the nominations had been made by the Board and would be presented to the membership later in the meeting, since it was the League's policy always to have nominations from the floor.

Referring to item 2, the president said that under a the explanation to the membership would include an explanation of the present plans which have been submitted to the membership and which could very likely be given through the American Journal of Nursing. Explanations would also be given by representatives on the enlarged structure committee to state groups, so that there would be opportunities for the various groups to discuss the plans, and express their opinions, with someone who had been taught to interpret those plans. Under b the opinions of the membership would be brought back to the enlarged structure committee for consideration. Under c the structure committee would set up methods for electing delegates from each organization to the constitutional convention and of bringing the constitutional convention together. Under d the enlarged structure committee would submit to the constitutional convention the drafts of the constitutions for the various plans which would be suggested to the constitutional convention. Miss Sleeper called particular attention to the plural form of the word "constitutions," explaining that if the representatives should choose Plan I in the modified form, one constitution would be required; but if it chose Plan II, two constitutions would be necessary. The memberships' appointed delegates to the constitutional convention could modify the proposed constitutions if they were not satisfactory, and finally under e the constitutions would be ratified by the membership of each organization.

The president explained the need for money, as indicated under item 3, for travel expenses and maintenance of the delegates.

It was moved and seconded that the amended recommendations as mimeographed be accepted, and the membership then proceeded to discuss them.

It was moved, seconded, and carried unanimously that item 1 as amended be accepted. Miss Sleeper pointed out that that would make a total of eight representatives, since the executive secretary and the president would be members ex officio.

A member asked if voting to approve these suggestions regarding next steps would mean that the League is in favor of a reorganization. Miss Sleeper said, "We are voting to send representatives to a committee which is to explain to our membership, as well as to the membership of the other organizations, the proposals which have now been submitted; and that we are approving further study of the plans which have been submitted to us; that we are not committing ourselves to anything.'

The original motion, that the amended recommendations as mimeographed be accepted, was then carried unanimously.

NOMINATION OF REPRESENTATIVES TO STRUCTURE COMMITTEE

The second item on the agenda was the presentation of the ballot for representatives on the enlarged structure committee, as nominated by the Board of Directors. The secretary read the ballot.

Marjorie Bartholf, Texas
Helen L. Bunge, Ohio
Stella Goosnay, Massachusetts
Anna D. Wolf, Maryland
Nellie X. Hawkinson, Illinois
Katharine J. Hoffman, Washington
Estella Mann, California

The president then asked for nominations from the floor, pointing out that the Board's ballot did not include any lay member so that that nomination must come from the membership. Since it was possible that some persons might be nominated who were not present at the meeting to give their immediate consent, the policy that any nominee must give her consent before her name is proposed was waived, and a motion was made, seconded, and carried unanimously that any person having the largest number of votes on the ballot finally presented be asked to serve on the committee, and if she is unable to serve, the person having the next number of votes be asked to serve, and so on throughout the number, until five nurse members and one lay member are elected.

The following nominations of professional members were made from the floor:

Sister Henrietta, Louisiana
Sister Aniceta, Pennsylvania
Sister Ancina, Minnesota
Ann Gardiner, West Virginia
Helen Hansen, California
Virginia Henderson, New York
Mary M. Richardson, New York

Nominations of lay members were as follow:

Mrs. Arthur Spiegel, Illinois
Dr. Genevieve K. Bixler, Washington, D. C.
Mrs. Chester Bolton, Ohio
Dr. Esther Lucile Brown, New York

The president appointed as tellers for the election, the following:

Madeline McConnell, Chairman, Chicago
Elsie L. Campbell, New York
Mary Norcross, Massachusetts
Sister Agnes

AMENDMENT TO CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION

The third item on the agenda was consideration of a revision of the certificate of incorporation to make it more correctly state the scope of the League’s activities. The secretary read the original certificate of incorporation.

CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS, that we, the undersigned, citizens of the United States, Jane Delano, Clara D. Noyes, and Georgia Nevins, citizens of the District of Columbia, and Lillian Clayton, a resident of Philadelphia, Pa., and Elizabeth A. Greener, a resident of the City of New York, desiring to avail ourselves of the provisions of Sec. 599, et sequitur, of the code of law of the District of Columbia, do hereby certify as follows:

1st. This organization shall be known as the National League of Nursing Education.

2d. The term for which it is organized shall be perpetual.

3d. The object of this association shall be to consider all questions relating to nursing education; to define and maintain in schools of nursing throughout the country minimum standards for admission and graduation; to assist in furthering all matters pertaining to public health; to aid in all measures for public good by cooperating with other bodies, educational, philanthropic, and social; to promote by meetings, papers, and discussions, cordial professional relations and fellowship and in all ways to develop and maintain the highest ideals in the nursing profession.

4th. The number of its trustees for the first year of its existence shall be thirteen.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF we have hereunto set our hands and seals on this 13th day of March, 1917.

James Picker, E. J. Morton as to ........................................... Elizabeth Greener, R.N. (Seal)
Lillian Clayton, R.N. (Seal)

Robert E. P. Kreiter as to .................................................. Jane A. Delano (Seal)
Georgia Nevins (Seal)
Clara D. Noyes (Seal)

The proposed rewording was as follows:

The object of this association shall be to consider all questions relating to nursing education; to advance educational aims and standards in nursing; to assist in furthering the development of public health; to aid in measures for public good by cooperating with other bodies, educational, philanthropic, and social; to promote helpful and cordial professional relationships, and to develop and maintain the highest ideals in the nursing profession.

The president pointed out that the major change was in the clause "to define and maintain in schools of nursing throughout the country minimum standards for admission and graduation," which had been changed to read, "to advance educational aims and standards of nursing."

It was voted unanimously that the certificate of incorporation be amended as suggested.
APPOINTMENT OF COMMITTEE ON NOMINATIONS*

Appointment of the Committee on Nominations was next on the agenda. In accordance with the Bylaws, three of the members of this committee were to be elected by the membership present at the business session and two were to be appointed by the Chair. Miss Sleeper announced that she had appointed Julia M. Miller, of Georgia, chairman, and Mrs. Dorrit Sledge, of California.

The floor nominated the following persons:

Dotaline E. Allen, Indiana
Sister Mary Therese, Illinois
Mary E. Gilmore, Massachusetts

The president appointed Ella E. McNeil, of Michigan, and Harriet L. Mather, of Louisiana, to be tellers for the ballot.

INTRODUCTION OF NEW STAFF MEMBERS

The president introduced Katharine B. Amberson, newly appointed nurse consultant in tuberculosis nursing, who had joined the League's Headquarters staff in September. Another new member of the Headquarters staff, Elizabeth L. Kemble, was not present to acknowledge the president's introduction, but Miss Sleeper explained her position as director of the Department of Measurement and Educational Guidance.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS

This fiftieth annual convention of the National League of Nursing Education has been a challenging one to all of us who have been privileged to attend it.

What has been presented here will enable us to return to our respective states, not with the complete solution to our many problems, but with definite guides toward eventual solutions.

We wish to express the appreciation of the National League of Nursing Education to the Committee on Program for the uniquely co-operative program which they so carefully planned and to the Committee on Arrangements for the care with which the details of the convention plans have been carried out.

We wish to thank the other committees and individual persons for their splendid co-operation and personal interest in making our stay in Atlantic City a pleasant and profitable one.

The management and employees of the various hotels in Atlantic City have given their thought to making our stay convenient and comfortable. The committee wishes to commend the monitors and ushers for their splendid efforts.

*See page 317.
The exhibitors and publishers, as well as the photographers, have added to the educational value and interest of the convention, while the press has given generous publicity to the meetings. The Atlantic City Chamber of Commerce has given valuable assistance in planning for and in carrying out the details of the program.

We wish to thank the hostess state organization, the New Jersey State League of Nursing Education, for its gracious hospitality and for its part in making the convention a pleasant and successful one.

To all of these and to many others we give a grateful vote of thanks for making this convention a challenging and outstanding meeting.

Respectfully submitted,

Ada Hawkins, Chairman
Margaret C. Kelleher
Mrs. Dorrit Sledge

Discussion of Federal Aid for Nursing Education

A member from the floor spoke of the anxiety with which she viewed the present trend permitting untrained, poorly trained, or partially trained people to take care of the sick. She said that those who believe that the really important service that professional nurses give is the personal care of the patient should bend all efforts to the creation of more professional nurses; that at this time there are about one hundred health bills being considered by our legislative bodies, in which provision for the creation of professional nurses is not well represented; that Mr. Bragman, as spokesman for Senator Pepper, had said the previous evening that it would be of the greatest assistance to legislators to have representatives of our organizations resident in Washington for conferences with men who are interested in promoting health legislation; that it is believed that Senator Pepper is ready to introduce a bill which would provide grants and aids to states for nursing education, and that he had said, "We want to know in detail what you people want."

In response to these comments Miss Sleeper told of two committees with which the League has worked this year—the Committee on Careers in Nursing, which is a new postwar name for the former NNC Committee on Recruitment; and a new special committee of the League to prepare a statement relative to nursing education implications in current Federal legislation, that could be used as a basis for hearings on the several bills of concern to nurses when the American Nurses' Association goes into action.

The former NNC Recruitment Committee, now the Committee on Careers, was referred to the League when plans for the curtailment of the National Nursing Council's activities were being made, because it seemed to Miss Sleeper that the educator group of nurses should have the primary responsibility for forwarding a recruiting movement for both basic and advanced programs and courses in nursing.
Regarding the second committee, Miss Sleeper explained that the ANA has, over a period of years, carried on the legislative activities for the entire professional nursing group. The League has had to be careful about legislative activities, in order to avoid subjecting itself to taxation. The time came, however, when it was felt that a group of League representatives should be prepared to speak before the Congress on legislative activities affecting nursing education, and, accordingly, appointed this special committee. In calling upon the chairman, Eugenia K. Spalding, to speak, Miss Sleeper said that Mrs. Spalding had worked very hard last spring in Washington, with a small committee, to study the legislation that had educational implications.

The committee, Mrs. Spalding said, was comprised of herself as chairman, and as members Anna D. Wolf, Elizabeth K. Porter, Sister M. Olivia Gowan, and M. Cordelia Cowan. In addition to the members, various representatives of the ANA and the NOPHN attended the meetings by invitation, and also Blanche Pfefferkorn. The committee studied very carefully the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill, the mental hygiene bill, the hospital facilities bill, the Pepper bill for maternal and child care, and a number of others. It prepared statements for the Wagner-Murray-Dingell and Pepper bills, working through the ANA's Committee on Federal Legislation. Mrs. Spalding raised two questions: (1) Should the League have a continuous committee to study bills from the standpoint of their implications for education and education for nursing service? (2) How can the League's committee, if it makes such studies, get the appropriate representation at hearings?

Mrs. Spalding read a recommendation in the report of the ANA's committee to outline a definite program with regard to Federal and state legislation discouraging any organization other than the ANA from approaching congressmen and working with various Federal agencies on measures affecting nurses or nursing on the basis that (1) it confuses issues; (2) it dissipates interest; (3) it interferes with timing of planned programs; (4) it implies lack of unity; (5) it creates confusion in the minds of congressmen and the public. Mrs. Spalding urged that the League work out a plan whereby the educational implications for nursing service might be studied from the beginning and appropriate results of such a study appear in the statements for hearings.

Miss Sleeper reported that this committee's statement on the maternal and child welfare act was filed at the hearing of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill and that in the new planning for the Children's Bureau and their new allotment of funds, nursing education was again included and was represented at the Advisory Committee of the Children's Bureau hearings, and that nursing education is well placed in all of their committee reports.

In reply to a question from the floor as to whether it would not be a good thing to have a permanent committee with representatives of the NOPHN, the NLNE, and the ANA in residence in Washington on full-time salaries to attend Congressional hearings, Miss Sleeper replied that the ANA now has a part-time paid person in Washington for that purpose and hopes to have a full-time person, and that our problem has come from the fact that the ANA’s interests in legislation do not always include the educational interests. If we were to have a representative in Washington, as suggested, it would entail, without any doubt, a change in the League’s charter and a new plan to pay the taxes which have to be paid by an organization that is carrying on legislative activities. A member of the League has been on the ANA committee for about a year, but last year the committee did not get into very active work so that the League’s representative, Mrs. Spalding, did not feel she always had the opportunity to represent the League as she would have liked to, and the committee was not as concerned with educational problems in relation to legislation as was the League.

In the general discussion that followed concerning the principle of Federal aid to nursing, the point was stressed that the League is not thinking in terms of Federal aid for education alone, but also for the provision of practitioners; that there is no point in creating legislation that extends care, when prepared personnel are not provided to give care; and that if bills continue to go through which increase medical and nursing care to the population before there are sufficient prepared nurses to give care, the group of untrained or poorly trained persons previously referred to will be utilized. Those were the points that were emphasized by the League in its hearing about the maternal and child welfare act. It was also brought out that by "Federal aid for nursing education” is not meant only money paid into schools, but provision for research and studies. The difficulty of amending bills once they get into committee was put forth as a reason why advisory counseling by nurse educators should be given before bills are sent to committees. Because of the mechanics of the League’s relationship to the ANA, educational implications in pending bills have been overlooked and the ANA representative has called the League’s attention to bills only after they were well formulated.

A motion was made, seconded, and carried (with five dissenting votes) that the League, as represented at this meeting, is sympathetic to the principle of Federal aid.

A motion was made and seconded that a small committee be formed to draw up a statement of proposed objectives for Federal aid for nursing education. It was said that last year the NNC had drawn up a statement of principles which, since they were the best then available, had to be used by the League, but that now the League should state its own principles.

In reply to a question as to whether states, counties, and other local groups would lose their sense of responsibility toward nursing education if aid should be given by the Federal Government, Miss Sleeper said that the Bolton bill was an exception to the usual Governmental plan for granting aid, and that the aid planned by the Wagner-Murray-Dingell and Pepper bills is to be given through the states—sometimes, but not always, to be matched by the states. To a comment that Federal aid has, in certain instances in the past, resulted in Federal control, it was replied that such control has been in protection of minimum standards and in no sense limited what might be developed above minimum standards.

A motion was made and seconded and carried that the original motion be amended so that the committee might be enlarged to include representatives of the ACSN and the NOPHN.

Thereupon, the original motion was carried unanimously, as follows: That a committee be formed to draw up a statement of proposed objectives for Federal aid for nursing education, and that the ACSN and the NOPHN be invited to have representation on the committee.

Virginia Henderson reported an official request made by Senator Pepper for a definite statement from the League of what it wanted specifically in the way of support for nursing education in legislation.

The president said that would be handled by the new committee on legislation.

APPOINTMENT OF COMMITTEE ON NOMINATIONS

After the report by the tellers was given, the president announced the membership of the Committee on Nominations for 1946-47 as follows:

Appointed by the Chair: Julia M. Miller, chairman, of Georgia; Mrs. Dorrit Sledge, of California

Elected from the floor: Dotaline E. Allen, of Indiana; Sister Mary Therese, of Illinois; Mary E. Gilmore, of Massachusetts

DISCUSSION OF NEED FOR A PUBLIC RELATIONS PROGRAM

The need of informing the public and the medical profession about nursing education was said to be urgent, in view of the current misunderstanding about the basic reason for the shortage of professional nurses and the subsequent increasing demand by the medical profession and the public for practical nurses. It was said that because the nursing profession has been stressing the desirability of college training before nurse training, and because it has been publicizing the opportunities in nursing for college-trained people, the impression has been stronger than justified that educational requirements for admission to schools of nursing have been raised too high to encourage quantity as well as quality of nurses. Actually, at the present time 91 per cent of all applicants for admission to schools of nursing are from high schools. It was felt that more support of professional nurses would be gained from the public and the doctors if this were made clear to them; but at the same time, the nursing profession should not let itself be discouraged from continuing its attempt to advance its educational requirements as the other women's professions have done—social service workers, nutritionists, and others—because it is not right to put young people into so serious a profession as nursing, with all its problems today, and not have them ready to take the knowledge that is being poured out of the universities.

It was the consensus that the executive secretary should take the sense of this discussion and these specific points that have been mentioned to the new part-time public relations appointee for the League and see if she could work them out for use by the ANA and the AHA and all other professional groups concerned with this.

REPORT ON THE ELECTION OF REPRESENTATIVES TO THE ENLARGED STRUCTURE COMMITTEE

Since the ballots for the representatives on the enlarged structure committee had not been completely counted by this time, it was voted that the report of the tellers for election of these representatives should be announced through the American Journal of Nursing* or through reports to state league presidents.

REPORT ON THE ELECTION OF LEAGUE OFFICERS

MADAM PRESIDENT AND MEMBERS:

I would like to give the report of the Committee on Tellers of the election of officers for the National League of Nursing Education. The total votes cast were 611. For president: Ruth Sleeper, 522; Clara Benham, 85; blank votes, 4; void, none. For treasurer: Lucile Petry, 381; Charlotte Skooglund, 227; blank votes, 2; void, 1. For nurse director: Elizabeth Bixler, 315; Agnes Gelinas, 349; Stella Goostray, 340; Clara Lewis, 203; Virginia Olcott, 223; Eugenia K. Spalding, 360; blank votes, 37; void, 6. For lay director: Genevieve K. Bixler, 331; Ruth Boynton, 270; blank votes, 10; void, none.

Respectfully submitted,

CYNTHIA CURTIN, Chairman
KATHERINE HOFFMAN CHARLOTTE STUMP
ELDA HARTUNG DAPHNE ROLF
KATIE LEE WALTON MARTHA JOHNSON

The report was accepted, and the secretary read the names of elected officers.

President—Ruth Sleeper
Treasurer—Lucile Petry
Nurse Directors—Eugenia K. Spalding, Agnes Gelinas, Stella Goostray
Lay Director—Genevieve K. Bixler

It was voted unanimously that the ballots should be destroyed.

Acceptance of Election by the President,
Ruth Sleeper, R.N.

I am not going to make any long speech to you now. I would like to say to you that I am very happy to be re-elected, because I appreciate the confidence which that election shows. I think we have very difficult years ahead of us, and the only reason that I have courage to go on, knowing now what I am in which I did not know two years ago, is because of the staff at Headquarters on whose support I have leaned so heavily for the last two years and whom I have never found wanting in any respect—in fact, they are always ahead; and, also, because I can count on the support of state league presidents and our Advisory Council and on you as individual members.

Thank you very much for the confidence that you have shown in me.

The meeting adjourned to 12:30 P.M.

BYLAWS

ARTICLE I

MEMBERSHIP

SECTION 1. Members in the National League of Nursing Education shall be classified as follows:

A. Nurse members with qualifications as set forth in Sections 2 and 3:
   Active, including sustaining

B. Lay members with qualifications as stated under Section 4:
   Active, including sustaining

C. Honorary members as defined in Section 5

SEC. 2. An applicant for nurse membership shall, after October 1, 1946, qualify by:

   a. (1) Having been graduated from a school of nursing accredited by the legally authorized state accrediting agency and connected with a hospital having a daily average of 50 patients during the final year of the applicant's course and offering a program consisting of practice and instruction in medical, surgical, obstetric, and pediatric nursing; or
   (2) Having been graduated from a school of nursing accredited by the legally authorized state accrediting agency and connected with a hospital having a daily average of from 30 to 49 patients, and either having had in her undergraduate course an affiliation or affiliations of not less than six months in a state-accredited school of nursing connected with a hospital having a minimum daily average of 100 patients, or having completed satisfactorily, after graduation, a course or courses of not less than six months; or
   (3) Having been graduated from a school of nursing in a foreign country, such school of nursing having been accredited by a board or other authority constituted for that purpose in the country in which such school of nursing is located.

   b. Having become a registered nurse in one or more states.

   c. Being a member of the American Nurses' Association.

   d. (1) Holding an advisory, executive, teaching, supervisory, assistant supervisory, head nurse or assistant head nurse position in an educational or preventive organization or in a government service employing nurses; or
   (2) Holding a position as director of nursing service in a hospital without a school of nursing; or
   (3) Holding a position as administrator or instructor in a school of practical nursing approved by the legally authorized state accrediting agency or the National Association for Practical Nurse Education.

   e. Being recommended for active membership by the Committee on Eligibility.

SEC. 3. A sustaining member is an active member interested in furthering the financial welfare of the League, who has paid the dues required of such membership.

SEC. 4. An applicant for lay membership shall qualify for active or sustaining membership by:

   a. (1) Having been or being a member of a board of trustees of a hospital conducting a school of nursing; or
   (2) Having been or being a member of a school of nursing committee; or
   (3) Having been or being a member of a board of trustees or of a faculty of a college or university concerned with nursing education; or
(4) Having been or being a member of a board or a committee member of a public health agency concerned with nursing education for student or graduate nurses; or

(5) Having been or being a member of the administrative or teaching staff of a school of nursing; or

(6) Having made or making important surveys or studies or other recognized contributions to nursing education.

b. Being recommended for lay membership by the Committee on Eligibility or by special action of the Board of Directors.

SEC. 5. Honorary membership may be conferred by a unanimous vote of the voting body at the annual convention or business meeting on persons who have rendered distinguished service or valuable assistance to the nursing profession, the names having been recommended by the Board of Directors. Honorary membership shall not be conferred on more than two persons at any convention. Honorary members do not pay dues.

SEC. 6. a. An applicant for active membership in the National League of Nursing Education shall be accepted in one of four ways:

(1) As a member of a local league of nursing education, which gives automatic membership in state leagues and the National League of Nursing Education; or

(2) As a member of a state league where there is no local league, which gives automatic membership in the National League of Nursing Education; or

(3) As an individual member if residing in a state which has no state league, or upon special action of the Board of Directors; or

(4) As an individual member if residing in a state where Negro nurses are not eligible for membership in the state league. Membership in the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses will be accepted in lieu of membership in the American Nurses' Association.

b. Applicants desiring to join the National League of Nursing Education as individual members shall make application on a form furnished by the executive secretary. The form, after being properly filled in, shall be sent with the required dues to the executive secretary.

SEC. 7. An active member in good standing in any state league who changes her residence to another state may be admitted by transfer, sent by the treasurer of the state league she is leaving to the treasurer of the state league to which she is going, entitling her to membership for the remainder of the fiscal year without further payment of dues. Members living in one state and working in another or temporarily located in a state may be permitted to continue their membership in the state of their choice.

SEC. 8. An active member in active military service who is not permanently located may retain her membership on an individual basis by paying dues directly to the National League of Nursing Education.

SEC. 9. An active member who has withdrawn from the National League of Nursing Education or whose membership has lapsed on account of nonpayment of dues may be reinstated by paying the regular annual dues for the current year to the state in which she is a resident, except as provided in Sec. 7.

ARTICLE II

OFFICERS

SECTION 1. The officers of the National League of Nursing Education shall consist of a president, a vice president, a secretary, and a treasurer, all of whom shall be nurses. These four officers, and eight directors one of whom shall always be a lay member, and the president of the American Nurses' Association, the president of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing, and the editor of the American Journal of Nursing, shall constitute a Board of Directors.

ARTICLE III

ELECTIONS

SECTION 1. The president, the treasurer, and four directors shall be elected in the even-numbered years to serve for two years. The vice president, the secretary, and four directors shall be elected in the odd-numbered years to serve for two years.

SEC. 2. All elections of officers and directors referred to in Section 1 of this Article shall be held by mail within two months preceding the annual convention or business meeting. All elections shall be by ballot. All elections shall be had by plurality vote.

SEC. 3. The president shall appoint the necessary tellers of election.

SEC. 4. All members whose dues have been received at Headquarters by the first day of the month preceding the month of the annual convention or business meeting shall receive ballots. Ballots, enclosed in special envelopes, shall be returned to Headquarters by the date indicated annually.

SEC. 5. Tellers shall count and record all votes, and all records shall be checked by an auditor, and a certified and sealed report shall be given to the secretary.

SEC. 6. Each officer shall hold office until the adjournment of the annual meeting at which her successor has been elected.

SEC. 7. In the event of a vacancy in any office, the Board of Directors shall fill the vacancy until her successor is elected.

ARTICLE IV

DUTIES OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS

SECTION 1. The Board of Directors shall:

a. Supervise the affairs of the League, perform all necessary functions of management, and devise and mature measures for its advancement and welfare.

b. Hold a business meeting immediately preceding and immediately following each convention and meet at other times at the call of the president or at the request of five or more members of the Board.

c. Transact the general business of the League in the interim between annual conventions.

d. Report to the League at each annual convention the business transacted by it during the preceding year.

e. Provide for the proper care of all books and papers of the League.

f. Select a place of deposit for funds and provide for their investment.

g. Provide for the auditing of accounts.

b. Provide for the maintenance of National Headquarters and for making this office the center of all activity of the League in connection with the American Nurses' Association and the National Organization for Public Health Nursing.

i. Appoint an executive secretary, define her duties, except as herein provided, and fix her compensation.

j. Appoint all committees not otherwise provided for.

k. Act upon applications for membership.
SEC. 2. The president shall:

a. Preside at conventions and at all meetings of the Board of Directors and the Council of State Leagues and be a member ex officio of all committees.
b. Issue vouchers for all bills paid by the treasurer.
c. Perform all other acts and duties of a general nature as may be incident to her office.

SEC. 3. The vice president shall perform the duties of the president in her absence or during her inability to act and such other duties as may be delegated to her by the president.

SEC. 4. The secretary shall:

a. Keep the minutes of the convention and of the meetings of the Board of Directors and of the Council of State Leagues.
b. Preserve all papers, letters, and records of all transactions, and have custody of the corporate seal.
c. Present to the Board of Directors all applications for membership together with the recommendations of the Committee on Eligibility.
d. Report to the Board of Directors at each annual convention or upon request.
e. Within one month after retiring, deliver to the new secretary all books, papers, and reports of the League in her custody with a supplemental report covering all transactions from January 1 to the close of the annual convention.
f. Send a notice of the annual convention to each member at least one month in advance.

SEC. 5. The treasurer shall:

a. Collect, receive, and have charge of all funds of the League, and deposit such funds in a bank designated by the Board of Directors.
b. Pay only such bills as have been ordered by the president.
c. Give a bond subject to the approval of the Board of Directors for the faithful performance of her duties, said bond to be paid from the treasury.
d. Report to the Board of Directors the financial standing of the League at each annual convention and upon request.
e. Deliver, one month after retiring, to the new treasurer all papers, books, records, money of the League in her custody, with a supplemental report covering all transactions from January 1 to the close of the annual convention.

SEC. 6. Necessary expenses incurred by officers or committees in the service of the League shall, upon approval of the Committee on Finance, be refunded from the general treasury. Necessary expenses of the directors shall be fixed at an appropriate amount by the Committee on Finance in its absolute discretion, and shall be included in the budget of the finances of the League. The amount so fixed shall be refunded from the general treasury.

ARTICLE V
COUNCIL OF STATE LEAGUES

SECTION 1. The officers of the National League and the presidents of the state leagues belonging to the National League shall constitute a Council of State Leagues.
SEC. 2. The duties of the Council of State Leagues shall be to keep the National League informed of the progress of nursing education in the states represented and to co-operate with the National League of Nursing Education.

SEC. 3. Meetings of the Council of State Leagues shall be held in connection with each annual convention or business meeting and at any other time as called by the Board of Directors. The members shall be prepared to report on the work in their respective state leagues.

SEC. 4. In the absence of its president a state league may be represented in the Council of State Leagues by an alternate appointed by the state league.

ARTICLE VI
EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

SECTION 1. Except as herein specifically provided, the duties of the executive secretary shall be outlined by the Board of Directors.

SEC. 2. She shall be responsible for the disbursements of all Headquarters funds as assigned by the Board of Directors, and in this capacity shall be bonded.

SEC. 3. She shall attend the meetings of the Board of Directors and shall be a member ex officio of all committees.

ARTICLE VII
STANDING COMMITTEES

SECTION 1. Except as otherwise specifically provided, standing committees shall be appointed by the Board of Directors to serve for one year. Lay members shall be entitled to all the privileges of membership on committees which are extended to nurse members. The standing committees shall consist of at least three members and shall be as follows:

a. Administration of the Accrediting Program
b. Convention Arrangements
c. Curriculum
d. Eligibility
e. Executive
f. Finance
g. Measurement and Educational Guidance
h. Nominations
i. Program
j. Publications
k. Revision
l. Studies

SEC. 2. The Committee on the Administration of the Accrediting Program. This committee is responsible for the application of the policies and procedures of accrediting, which includes responsibility for the administration of the program.

SEC. 3. The Committee on Convention Arrangements. This committee shall be responsible for the plans to be followed in carrying on the annual convention by making arrangements for suitable places for general and committee meetings, hotel accommodations, exhibits, and general information.
Sec. 4. The Committee on Curriculum. The work of this committee shall include the study and presentation of the curriculum for schools of nursing and any other activity approved by the Board of Directors.

Sec. 5. The Committee on Eligibility. This committee shall check the qualifications of the applicants applying for individual membership according to the requirements of the Bylaws and, if sufficient data are not furnished on the application form, shall secure such data by correspondence.

Sec. 6. The Executive Committee. This committee shall have the power to act between Board meetings upon all matters which are referred by the president or executive secretary which do not require the formation of new policies, and to pass upon applications for membership which come from states where there are no state leagues.

Sec. 7. The Committee on Finance. This committee shall prepare and present a budget of the finances of the League to the Board of Directors, advise concerning investments, and approve other than routine expenditures.

Sec. 8. The Committee on Measurement and Educational Guidance. The committee shall study those needs of the profession and nursing education the solution of which may be approached through measurement, evaluation, and educational guidance, and shall carry on research relating to nursing ability and achievement.

Sec. 9. The Committee on Nominations. The committee shall consist of five members, two of whom shall be appointed by the chair and three by the house. On or before each September 1 preceding the annual convention, this committee shall issue to each state league a form on which the state league shall submit the name of one nominee for each office to be filled. These forms shall be signed by the president or secretary of the state league and returned to the Committee on Nominations of the National League of Nursing Education before December 1 preceding the annual convention.

From the forms returned by the state leagues, the Committee on Nominations shall prepare a ticket consisting of two names of the nominees receiving the highest number of votes for each office, and eight names for the office of directors. If the list of names submitted is not sufficient to form a ticket, the Committee on Nominations shall have power to add names so that a full ticket may be made up. No name shall be presented to the Board of Directors or to the convention, either by the Committee on Nominations or from the floor, unless the nominee has consented and is free to serve if elected. This report shall be in the hands of the secretary by January 1.

The list of nominations shall be published in the March issue of the American Journal of Nursing, or as soon thereafter as possible, shall be mailed to each state league at least two months previous to the annual convention, and shall be posted on the daily bulletin board on the first day of the annual convention.

Sec. 10. The Committee on Program. The chairman of this committee shall request from the members of the Committee on Program, the officers of the National League of Nursing Education, the state leagues, and chairmen of all committees, suggestions for the program. This committee shall submit a draft of this program to the Board of Directors to be acted upon at the mid-year meeting. The committee shall be responsible for all correspondence, unless otherwise instructed.

Sec. 11. The Committee on Publications. This committee shall study publication needs of the nursing profession in relation to the program of the League and shall act in an advisory capacity to the executive secretary, at her discretion, in her function as editor of the Nursing Education Department of the American Journal of Nursing.
SEC. 12. The Committee on Revision. This committee shall investigate the eligibility of all state leagues applying for membership in this organization and make recommendations concerning the applications to the Board of Directors. It shall receive all proposed amendments to the Bylaws of this association and submit them for action at the annual convention. This committee shall also receive from state leagues proposed amendments or revisions to their constitution and bylaws for the purpose of keeping them in harmony with the Bylaws of this organization. The committee will send them, with recommendations, to the executive secretary of the National League of Nursing Education.

SEC. 13. The Committee on Studies. This committee shall approve the studies to be undertaken by the Director of Studies, the plans for and reports of such studies, and otherwise serve in an advisory capacity to the Director.

SEC. 14. Each committee shall present a written report of its activities to the annual convention and to the Board of Directors at the mid-year meeting, and keep the executive secretary informed of its work, as may be indicated, during the year.

ARTICLE VIII

DUES

SECTION 1. The annual dues for all active members of the National League of Nursing Education shall be $5.00, except that dues for assistant supervisors, head nurses, and assistant head nurses shall be $4.00 for the first year only, after which they shall be $5.00.

a. In states where there is a state league, dues ($5.00) for all active members shall be paid through the state league on the basis of membership as of March 1 of each year, except for the first year of membership, when dues shall be paid at the time of application.

b. In states where there is no state league, dues ($5.00) shall be paid directly to the National League of Nursing Education. Dues shall accompany application.

SEC. 2. The annual dues for sustaining members shall be $13.00, which shall entitle the members to receive pamphlets published by the League during the year, not to exceed $2.50 in value.

a. In states where there is a state league, dues ($13.00) for all sustaining members shall be paid through the state league on the basis of membership as of March 1 of each year, except in the first year of membership, when dues shall be paid at the time of application.

b. In states where there is no state league, dues ($13.00) shall be paid directly to the National League of Nursing Education. Dues shall accompany application.

SEC. 3. Any state leagues or individual members failing to pay the annual dues by the first day of April shall receive a notice from the treasurer, and if the dues are not paid within two months, they shall forfeit all privileges of membership. Active individual members having forfeited their membership may be reinstated upon the payment of dues for the fiscal year.
APPENDIX

ARTICLE IX

MEETINGS

SECTION 1. A convention or business meeting of the National League of Nursing Education shall be held annually. In the even-numbered years it shall be held conjointly with the convention of the American Nurses' Association; in the odd-numbered years it shall be held at such time and place as shall be determined by the Board of Directors.

SEC. 2. The order of business at each convention shall include:

a. Reading of the minutes
b. Annual reports of all officers
c. Annual reports of presidents of all state leagues of nursing education
d. Annual reports of all standing committees
e. Address by the president
f. Miscellaneous business
g. Election of officers and directors

ARTICLE X

REPRESENTATION

SECTION 1. The voting body at the annual convention of the National League of Nursing Education shall consist of active and sustaining members of state leagues in good standing, and individual active and sustaining members in good standing.

ARTICLE XI

QUORUM

SECTION 1. A quorum of the Board of Directors shall be eight members.

SEC. 2. A quorum of the Council of State Leagues shall be ten members other than the officers.

SEC. 3. Members from fifteen states shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business at any annual convention.

ARTICLE XII

FISCAL YEAR

SECTION 1. The fiscal year of this association shall be the calendar year.

ARTICLE XIII

STATE LEAGUES

SECTION 1. Where the term "state league" is used in these Bylaws, the word "state" shall be understood to apply equally to any state of the United States of America, to the District of Columbia, or to any territory, possession, or dependency of the United States of America, and the rights and privileges, responsibilities and obligations of all members in the states, the District of Columbia, the territories, possessions, or dependencies shall be the same. (See Article I, Sec. 5, Bylaws, American Nurses' Association.)

SEC. 2. A group of League members desiring to form a state league of nursing education shall make application on the form furnished by the executive secretary. This form shall be properly filled in and, with a copy of the proposed constitution and bylaws, shall be sent to the executive secretary for referral to the Committee on Revision of the National League of Nursing Education. With a letter of approval, the proposed constitution and bylaws shall be sent to Headquarters for final approval by the Board of Directors.

ARTICLE XIV
DUTIES OF STATE LEAGUES

SECTION 1. It shall be the duty of each state league:

a. To know that all requirements for membership in the state and local leagues meet the requirements for membership in the National League of Nursing Education.

b. To know that the dues are paid by the first day of April of each year on the basis of membership the first day of March of each year.

c. To send to the president, secretary, and executive secretary of the National League of Nursing Education and to the American Journal of Nursing the names and addresses of all officers immediately after their election or appointment, together with the date and place of the next annual meeting.

d. To report the activities of the state and local leagues at the annual convention and at such other times as may be required.

e. To confer with the Committee on Revision of the National League of Nursing Education regarding changes in the state constitution and bylaws; all such changes to be made shall have attached to them a card of approval signed by the chairman of the Committee on Revision of the National League of Nursing Education, before being presented to the state league for action; upon the adoption of any changes by a state league, three copies of the changes adopted, accompanied by the card of approval, shall be sent to the executive secretary, one copy to be retained at National Headquarters, one to be sent to the secretary, and one to the chairman of the Committee on Revision.

f. To help organize local leagues, when desired.

g. To provide official representation, as a member of the Council of State Leagues, at each annual convention.

ARTICLE XV
PARLIAMENTARY AUTHORITY

SECTION 1. Deliberations of all meetings of the National League shall be governed by Robert's Rules of Order Revised.

ARTICLE XVI
THE OFFICIAL ORGAN

SECTION 1. The American Journal of Nursing shall be the official organ of the National League of Nursing Education.
ARTICLE XVII

AMENDMENTS

SECTION 1. These Bylaws may be amended at any annual convention by a two-thirds vote of the active members present and voting. All proposed amendments shall be in the possession of the secretary at least two months before the date of the annual convention and be appended to the call of the meeting.

SEC. 2. These Bylaws may be amended at any annual convention by the unanimous vote of the active members present and voting, without previous notice.

Baltimore 5, Maryland
REPORT OF THE ISABEL HAMPTON ROBB MEMORIAL FUND, INC., MCISSAC LOAN FUND, AND ISABEL HAMPTON ROBB SCHOLARSHIP FUND

Scholarships and loans

Five scholarships of $400 each have been awarded for the academic year 1946-47. The number of applications has greatly increased, as compared with the last few years during which Federal funds were readily available. Applications for scholarships are considered only once each year, in the spring. (Applications must be filed by April 30.)

Two loans have been granted in 1946 and in all twenty-five nurses are benefiting from loans for study. Nurses are to be encouraged to borrow from the fund when loans for educational purposes are needed, as many more loans could be granted.

The year 1945 has shown a decrease in contributions. It is particularly important that we bring up the contributions to the scholarship fund, as considerable increase in the principal of this fund is necessary in order to permit our being able to grant a number of scholarships each year. State and local leagues, state and district nurses' associations, and state organizations for public health nursing, as well as alumnæ associations, are urged to help to build up the scholarship fund.
