Biographical / Historical

Walter Lear (1923-2010) was a physician and activist.

Born in Brooklyn, New York City, he received his bachelor's degree from Harvard in 1943. He earned a medical degree from Long Island College of Medicine and a master's in hospital administration from Columbia University in 1948. After several years at the U.S. Public Health Service, in 1964 Lear became Philadelphia's deputy city health commissioner. In 1971, he was appointed state regional health commissioner. He later served as executive director of Philadelphia General Hospital.

Lear is well-known for his LGBT activism. He came out as gay in 1975 and may have been the first openly gay public officer in Philadelphia. He helped found the Gay and Lesbian Community Center (the William Way Center) and the Philadelphia AIDS Task Force. He was also a passionate advocate for health care reform, and founded the Institute of Social Medicine and Community Health to study the history of health care advocacy and promote progressive health policy. He also founded the Maternity Care Coalition of Greater Philadelphia.

Lear died in 2010 at age 87.
