FOREWORD

This edition of State-approved Schools of Nursing—L.P.N./L.V.N. includes all of the 1,043 schools that, as of October 15, 1966, conducted 1,081 programs preparing for licensure as a practical or vocational nurse. The listings of these schools were obtained from the boards of nursing of the states or other legal jurisdictions of the United States. These programs may differ considerably, but all of the graduates are eligible to write the licensing examination for this occupational group. The state boards have indicated those schools which were new, reactivated, or discontinued between October 15, 1965, and October 15, 1966. In some instances, the state boards or the directors of the programs have indicated schools that will be discontinued within the next year. Some jurisdictions have designated that one or more of the programs have initial, provisional, temporary, or conditional state approval as of October 15, 1966. The National League for Nursing, Department of Practical Nursing Programs has supplied the list of the first four programs that have been designated as accredited under its new program for accreditation. All other information is provided by the schools in their responses to an annual questionnaire that was mailed in October, 1966.

The abbreviations and symbols used in this report are interpreted on page 6. Programs have been classified as adult education programs, high school programs, and high school extended programs. Programs that are conducted primarily for out-of-school youth or adults and have not been planned as part of a high school curriculum have been classified as adult programs. Programs that are conducted primarily for high school students and lead concurrently to a high school diploma and eligibility for licensure have been classified as high school programs. Programs that are conducted primarily for high school students, lead to a high school diploma, but require some additional months of preparation after high school graduation are classified as high school extended programs. Many programs admit students other than those for whom their curriculum plans were primarily intended.

Of the 1,041 operating programs queried, responses were received from 1,018. Of the 40 schools that closed during the year, 38 responded. In some instances, a complete response was received but permission to publish was not included. Data from these programs are not included in the body of the report, but data from all respondents are included in the statistical tables on pages 68 through 72. Because a few programs did not respond, the true figures for admissions, graduations, and enrollments would be somewhat higher. However, many of the schools that did not respond usually have a very small number of students, and, therefore, the error is presumed to be very small.

Those of us who compiled the book and those who use the information are deeply indebted to the many contributors who made the book possible.
