Practical Nursing Career 1988-89

Information About NLN-Accredited Schools of Practical Nursing

Council of Practical Nursing Programs Division of Research
National League for Nursing • New York

INTRODUCTION

As a career, practical nursing offers you the rewards and satisfactions that come only from helping others. Also, practical nursing education is an excellent preparation for living—at home, at work, in the community.

Practical nursing programs prepare men and women to give nursing care, under the supervision of a registered nurse or a physician, to patients in simple nursing situations. In more complex situations, the licensed practical nurse functions as an assistant to the registered nurse.

Practical nursing programs are one of four types of programs that prepare for nursing. Preparation for practice as a registered nurse—R.N.—is provided in the baccalaureate degree program, the diploma program, and the associate degree program. Preparation for licensure as a practical nurse—L.P.N.—is usually completed in a one-year program. Be sure that you give careful consideration to the selection of the type of program that best meets your desired goal. Moving from one type of program to another is time-consuming and costly.

PRACTICAL NURSING EDUCATION

Practical nursing programs are approximately one year in length. In some states they are longer, and a few programs are shorter.

Each program establishes its own admission requirements. The majority of practical nursing programs accept both men and women who have good health and are interested in a service career. The academic requirements vary from state to state, so it is important that you contact the state board of nursing in the state of your choice for accurate information about academic admission requirements.

Tuition and other fees vary from program to program. If you feel you should work at a part-time job while attending a practical nursing program, consult the counselor in the program of your choice. Scholarships are sometimes available for deserving students; the counselor can advise you regarding scholarships and loans in your geographical area.

Most practical nursing programs require full-time attendance. This will include classes, practice of nursing procedures, and supervised learning experiences with real patients in a hospital, extended care facility, or nursing home.

More information is available in the annual NLN publication, Scholarships and Loans for Nursing Education (Pub. No. 41-1964, $8.95).

CHOOSING A SCHOOL

Start your selection of a program early by writing to several programs in your area to request their brochures. Be sure you choose a program that is approved by the state board of nursing of the state in which it is located. A state-approved program indicates that the program meets the legal requirements set by the state.

Satisfactory completion of a state-approved program in practical nursing is required before you are permitted to take the examination for licensure. The examination is given by the particular state board of nursing. When you have successfully passed the examination, the state board of nursing will license you as an L.P.N. or an L.V.N.
NLN-ACCREDITED PROGRAMS

The programs listed in this brochure have been accredited by the National League for Nursing. This means they have met high educational standards. NLN accreditation signifies that the program has received recognition through a process of specialized evaluation. The standards set by the accrediting body are uniform throughout the United States, and the type of approval it gives is national in scope; it is also voluntary rather than required by law. Achievement by a program of accreditation by NLN, which is recognized by the U.S. Office of Education and the Council of Postsecondary Accreditation as the national accrediting agency for practical nursing programs, signifies that it has met national standards of excellence for programs in nursing of this type.

THE FUTURE

Licensure as a practical or vocational nurse in the state in which the licensure was issued. Each state, through its state board of nursing, sets the legal minimum requirements for licensure. A practical nurse who is licensed in one state but wishes to work in a second state must apply to the state board of nursing in the second state for licensure. The requirements vary slightly from state to state. Usually, licensure in another state is not difficult to obtain and does not require the writing of an examination. Upon licensure, the L.P.N. should become a member of her national organization, the National Federation of Licensed Practical Nurses.

The licensed practical nurse is employed in hospitals, extended care facilities, nursing homes, clinics, and other health-care facilities.
