COMMUNITY NURSING SERVICES
ACCREDITED BY
NLN/APHA
May 1977

The 81 home health agencies and community nursing services listed below are those with accreditation in effect May 20, 1977. Using nationally accepted criteria, these agencies completed an extensive self-study and submitted a report. They were also site visited. Information supplied by the agency and from the site visit was then evaluated by a nine-member Board of Review, which consists of experts in the field of home and community health administration. Continuation of accreditation requires periodic review of updated information and future site visits at times specified by the board. A complete re-evaluation of the agency is done every five years.

Accreditation of Home Health Agencies and Community Nursing Services is a program sponsored jointly by the National League for Nursing and the American Public Health Association. NLN is responsible for the administration of the program. Policies are developed by a joint NLN/APHA Policy Committee; criteria are formulated by a committee of NLN's Council of Home Health Agencies and Community Health Services. The accreditation program was initiated in 1966; since that time applications from more than 200 community and home health agencies have been reviewed.

In 1974 the name of the program was changed by the boards of NLN and APHA from Accreditation of Community Nursing Services to Accreditation of Home Health Agencies and Community Nursing Services. This change was made to reflect the growing concern for and awareness of the broader spectrum of health care being delivered outside of hospitals, extended care facilities, and nursing homes. Representatives from the American Dietetic Association, American Occupational Therapy Association, American Physical Therapy Association, American Speech and Hearing Association, National Association of Social Workers, Inc., National Council of Homemaker-Home Health Aide Services, Inc., and representation from the Health Administration Medical Care and Public Health Nursing Sections of APHA, working with the CHHA/CHS members of the Accreditation Standards and Review Committee, have finalized the criteria to be used in this expanded program.

Accreditation is a voluntary process. An agency interested in accreditation services can request further information from the Division of Home Health Agencies and Community Health Services, NLN.
